Can City Find Tools To Make Plans Realities?

By CYNTHIA JOHNSON and GORDON WINTERS

Parts of the Chateau LaPleur/Charleston Courts residential complex are missing: one golf course, one swimming pool, an assortment of curbs and guard rails and two bridges.

Not lost, stolen or misplaced. Just never delivered. And Sterling Flott, the developer responsible for building the Chateau complex (near 63rd and Vine) is not the only one in Lincoln who failed to deliver all the goods he promised.

There are at least three other residential complexes which are still missing accoutrements listed in specifications set down when their permits were issued.

At Ruskin Place off U.S. 77 at the south edge of the city, a bicycle path and landscaping have not been completed.

At Georgetown East at 2600 S. 70th, a sewer hookup has not been installed.

And at The Villa at 2701 N. 70th a storm sewer has not been constructed, although engineering work is reportedly underway.

Regency Promises Fulfilled

Promised landscaping and a storm sewer were missing for years at the Regency Apartments at 74th and A, but the owners recently fulfilled those promises made when the complex was built.

Residential complexes like that in which the Chateau is located are referred to as Community Unit Plans (CUPs). There are 72 CUPs in the city.

According to the city code, cups are intended "to encourage the creative design of new living areas, as distinguished from standard lot sizes and standard street systems."

Under the CUP system, developers are permitted to build dwellings on a plot of land in whatever fashion they choose — townhouse, apartment, duplexes, etc. — as long as the density of the total area does not exceed zoning requirements.

In order to build a CUP, the developer first consults with the City-County Planning Department.

Once he gets its approval, the project then goes to the planning commission, which recommends to the City Council approval or denial of a special use permit.

The City Council has the final say on whether or not the permit is issued.

It's Up To Building Inspectors

Since CUPs require a special use permit, it is up to the city building inspection department to make sure the developer does what is specified in the plan approved by the City Council.

However, in the past, this enforcement system has broken down — especially in the development of large apartment complexes, according to Ray Hill of the planning department.

City Building Inspections Supt. Charles Seale contends that enforcement by his office has been inadequate at times because of the volume of special use permits that require monitoring.

There are 760 special permits, including the 72 CUPs, to ride herd on, Seale said.

"It was becoming so complex there was no way to keep up."

"What we needed before was a focal point of responsibility," Seale said. And in answer to that need, about a year and a half ago the city hired a person to coordinate enforcement of special permit conditions.

Another factor which frustrates enforcement arises when the original developer of a CUP sells the property before all the specifications are met.

Chateau's Buyer Lives In Germany

Such is the case with the Chateau complex. Sterling Flott, the initial developer, sold the complex to a buyer, Sophie Graf, who resides in Munich, Germany.

Often, the buyer purchases the property with no apparent knowledge that all the improvements have not been completed, according to city officials.

According to Tom Baasch, the inspections division enforcement coordinator, the division sometimes attempts to force completion of promised features by threatening to withhold occupancy permits for residences in the development.

That method is unsatisfactory, according to Seale. "If they keep on building, they'll keep on occupying, even though we cite them to the city law department."

Baasch added that the city's attorneys have advised him that "if the development is complete except for a sandbox in the corner, we can't legally deny them the occupancy permit."

As a means of enforcing conditions, the city has turned to increased bonding requirements.

However this is not popular with developers, since purchasing a bond is an added cost — one which is eventually passed on to the consumer.

Two Changes In Law Desired

In order to put pressure on developers, Seale and Baasch would like to see two changes in city zoning ordinances.

First, they would like to be able to withhold building permits if certain features of the plan are not completed at a certain stage of development.

That would permit a builder to have some homes occupied before completion of the plan. Yet it would give Baasch some clout.

In addition, Baasch and Seale would like to see instituted the practice of issuing a final "Certificate of Compliance."

The certificate would be the final okay on the completed CUP or other type of special use permit. If it were not obtained, bonds would be forfeited.

Of Three Cases, One Is In Court

At the present time, three cases of CUP violations have been turned over to the city legal department.

Two of the cases — involving the Villa and Regency apartments — have been negotiated successfully. The third — the Chateau/Charleston case — is pending in Lancaster District Court.

City law clerk Bill Austin said the Chateau suit will not be highly significant in terms of determining whether or not the city can force compliance in the construction of CUPs.

With the biggest of all the city's CUPs — the 1,000-acre Highlands development in northwest Lincoln — looming on the horizon, Seale and Baasch believe they can insure compliance with permit specifications — if the City Council gives them the additional enforcement tools they say they need.

Jet Pirates Free Hostages

LARNACA, Cyprus (AP) — Three Palestinian hijackers released the 75 passengers and five crew members of a Dutch jetliner Sunday in exchange for a safe conduct promise from Greek Cypriot authorities, airport officials said.

The freed hostages, including two Americans, were brought to the airport terminal building by bus from the DC-9 that had been parked at the edge of this small airport's runway for four hours.

The hijackers commandeered the jet Saturday over France and hoppedscotched around the Mediterranean through the night and morning, threatening to blow up the plane and all aboard unless Israel released eight prisoners.

The passengers greeted Georgios Tombazos, the Cypriot minister of communications and works who led the negotiations, with cheers and applause. One American among them, Otto Horsting of Selma, Ala., said the ordeal had been "scarifying."

"The hijackers grasped hand grenades and modern-looking guns," Horsting said. "We were told the plane was hijacked almost as soon as we left Nice."

"The hijackers did not ill-treat us. They said this was the only way they could make the world realize what was happening in their country, Palestine. They assured us that we would not be harmed," he said.

An official of KLM Royal Dutch Airlines said the passengers and crew of the plane would be flown to Amsterdam on Sunday night.

The three hijackers were driven to the terminal in the first busload of released hostages, then transferred to a police car, which sped off toward Nicosia, 30 miles away. A Libyan embassy official was in the car.

Airport officers said it was understood the hijackers would receive safe passage from Cyprus to a country of their choice.

The Israelis refused to accept any communication from the hijackers and blocked the runways of Ben-Gurion Airport in Tel Aviv to keep it from landing there. Israel has a policy of refusing demands by hijackers and terrorists.

The Israeli prisoners listed by the Arabs included Greek Catholic Archbishop Hilarion Capudji, convicted of smuggling arms into Israel, and Japanese Red Army terrorist Kozo Okamoto, who took part in the 1972 Lod Airport massacre in which 26 people died. The other six all had Arab names.

Most of the passengers were Dutch tourists returning from vacations in Spain and France, the airline said. There were two Americans, 13 Spaniards, five French, two Moroccans, two Indonesians, a West German, a Belgian, two Finns and three Arabs on the passenger list.

The KLM plane was taken over 20 minutes after it left Nice, France, on a flight to Amsterdam. It flew to Tunisia, where it was refueled. It then flew the 1,300 miles here, landed and was refueled again before taking off for Israel.

The Israeli army said the hijacked jet flew to within 100 miles of Tel Aviv, where two jet interceptors were scrambled to meet it. The Israelis blocked the runway at Ben-Gurion Airport with trucks and fire engines. However, the hijackers turned back to Larnaca for the second time.

Israeli Defense Minister Shimon Peres said later he had agreed to a Dutch request to keep warplanes away from the jetliner.

Before landing here the second time, the Arabs radioed detailed instructions on the release of the Israeli prisoners. They said the eight must be put aboard a plane out of Israel and a prearranged code word transmitted by representatives of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) and relayed to the hijackers.

"If this does not happen, we shall blow up the plane in the air," one of the hijackers told the tower.

A spokesman for the PFLP in Beirut denied any connection with the hijackers.

Horsting told reporters the Dutch captain of the plane recognized one of the sky pirates as one who had helped hijack a KLM plane four years earlier. "This is your second time off, isn't it?" the captain told the hijacker, Horsting said.

After the passengers left the plane, policemen found two hand grenades in the toilets and bomb disposal experts removed them.

In Amsterdam, Dutch Foreign Minister Max Van Der Stoep said Sunday night he was "particularly happy with the fact that no concessions had been made. More and more people begin to realize that giving in is of no use and can only make things worse."

The minister, who was flanked at a news conference by Premier Joop den Uyl, said the Dutch government intends to raise the terrorist issue at the next meeting of the United Nations General Assembly in New York.

Fair Mobs Set Records Under Clear (Sigh) Skies

By H.L. HOFFMASTER

Nebraska's State Fair set two records over the weekend but missed a third one.

The two records set were good: attendance. The record missed was a good one to miss: temperature.

Saturday and Sunday, 270,500 people poured through the gates with Saturday's 125,000 and Sunday's 145,500 both new records.

Fair officials forecast a crowd of 90,000 for Monday — Labor Day — and the weather bureau forecast temperatures in the 90s again.

Sunday's temperature, while warm at 93, was far below the 100-plus marks of last year's Labor Day weekend.

So many people came to the fair Sunday that gates had to be closed for two hours during the heat of the day and on-site parking lots were full soon after the gates opened at 9 a.m. with overflow lots bulging by 3 p.m.

When the fair opened officially on Friday, weather forecasters were predicting a slight chance of rain and Nebraskans welcomed the news.

Usually the state fair is good for a couple rainstorms and during this drought year, exhibitors from the plains farm and ranchland were hoping.

But not even Roy Clark could bring rain.

Clark, who performed his country-western "singing," picking, and a-grinning Sunday night in the entertainment center has been doing the fair circuit all summer. His advance man Lindy Hearne said that Clark has brought rain everywhere he goes.

But not to Nebraska and forecasters say the drought may continue throughout the fair, which ends Sept. 12.

So the fair remains dry... except for the wine judging exhibit, results of which will be announced Monday.

This is the first year for a wine class and so far there's been no trouble, either from anti-alcohol forces or tippers, fair manager Henry Brandt joked to newsmen at Sunday's news conference.

Over 130 exhibitors entered the wine contest.

livestock award in 4-H with the winners receiving cash for the first four who place and trophies. The top winner goes to the National 4-H Congress in Chicago in November.

"This is a real test of knowledge of their projects in an interview, in a written test, in ability to exhibit an animal and showmanship. It is a real test of personal ability," said Williams.

There will be a major change in the way hogs will be evaluated in the 4-H swine carcass contest. "We used to use a percentage of ham and loin in the carcass but this year we will be using a new system that calculates the percentage of the entire carcass that is lean meat," explained Williams.

Dr. Jim Wise said the sheep carcass contest was being made a bit tougher this year but they are using the same system as in past years. "It will require a better, leaner more muscled lamb to win a purple ribbon," Wise said.

Jim Gose, a meats specialist at the University of Nebraska, said there were more heavy cattle at the 4-H exhibit this year than in several years. "We usually have less than 500 grade choice but this year it will be more. Some of the cattle will actually be too heavy to qualify for the carcass contest," he said.

Williams said he was impressed with the attitude of people attending the youth part of the fair. "We have had drought, hail, low cattle prices, a drop in hog and lamb prices, lousy grain prices and people are still cheerful."

A good rain would do wonders," he said.

Big events for Monday are the Nebraska state championship tractor pull starting at 12:30 in front of the grandstand and the 4-H dog show, where dogs without blue-blood pedigrees can win blue ribbons.

Unlike confirmation shows where only pedigree dogs can win, the 4-H show is obedience only where the youngsters of Nebraska get a chance to show how smart and well-behaved "Spot" is. There will be purebreds in the show, which starts at 8:30 a.m. in the new entertainment center, but there will also be just plain dogs.

Dog show superintendent Bob Woolman says Monday's dog show is the largest ever with 239 entries.

'77 Session Could Begin in '76

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

The 1977 Legislature might convene in 1976.

If Nebraska voters approve a proposed constitutional amendment in November, the Unicameral will begin its annual sessions in December instead of January.

For the 1977 edition of the law-making body, it would mean a Dec. 13 start instead of Jan. 5.

The proposed constitutional change, approved for voter consideration on a 57-6 vote of the 1975 Legislature, is designed to allow the Unicameral to gear up early for its deliberations, then hit the legislative road running in January.

What senators have in mind is a few days in session in December to elect officers, introduce bills and organize themselves for the long run.

Then they would recess until January, allowing bills to be printed and public hearings to be scheduled so that full days of floor sessions and committee hearings could begin immediately when they return to Lincoln.

Clarks Clothing

Now Open, 122 So. 13th-Adv.

But there is nothing in the constitutional amendment which requires such a course of action.

The Legislature could begin in December and keep right on going, with only a holiday recess.

"But I suspect we would go in December for only two or three days, maybe a week at the most," Sen. Wally Barnett of Lincoln guessed Friday.

The chief advantage of a long recess would be increased "public awareness" of bills prior to their public hearings, Barnett said.

"The public would have time to look into the bills and be ready to participate in the public hearings in January."

Under the current system, the Legislature convenes in January and, in organizational (odd-numbered years like 1977, it wastes a good share of its first seven days in session waiting for committee hearings to begin.

Committee hearings, however, may not be held until seven calendar days after the bills are printed.

In 1975, the last organizational session, the Legislative Journal shows that the senators met for 32 minutes on their third day in session, for about an hour and a half for the next three days and for 52 minutes on their seventh day.

In even numbered non-organizational years, the Legislature can hold afternoon sessions to consider holdover bills from the previous year's session while waiting for committee hearings to begin.

Barnett, who is chairman of the Legislative Council's executive board, says a December or January beginning "makes little difference to me."

The Unicameral could employ the recess idea in January just as well as it could in December if it wishes, he noted.

The constitutional change was proposed by the executive board in 1975.

It provides for the Legislature to convene on the second Monday in December rather than the first Wednesday after the first Monday in January.

But the amendment would not disturb the session length limits of 60 and 90 days.

Top 4-H Lamb Honor Given Nevada Graff

By DOMINICK COSTELLO

The grand champion 4-H market lamb at the Nebraska State Fair is a Suffolk shown by Nevada Graff, 17, of Adams, in Lancaster County. Nevada is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Graff of Adams.

This is Miss Graff's 8th year in 4-H sheep competition. The reserve champion was a Dorset shown by Julie Nichols, 17, of Geneva. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Nichols of Geneva.

The open class Hereford show produced four out-of-state winners. The grand champion bull was shown by Lanker Herefords of Medicine Lodge, Kansas, and the reserve grand champion was shown by R. B. Graff of Leedy, Okla.

The grand champion female was shown by Glenkirk Farms of Maysville, Mo. The reserve champion was also a Glenkirk entry.

The huge collective booths in the Horticulture Department were judged with placings the same as last year. First place went to Phil Troupe of Adams, 2nd to Orst Erskine of Lincoln and 3rd to Carol Ann Gray of Davey.

Troupe is Erskine's son-in-law. The two families have been competitors in this event for several years.

Dr. Dave Williams and other 4-H officials are particularly pleased with the interest shown in the outstanding livestock exhibitor award.

This is regarded as the top overall livestock award in 4-H with the winners receiving cash for the first four who place and trophies. The top winner goes to the National 4-H Congress in Chicago in November.

The Legislature could begin in December and keep right on going, with only a holiday recess.

"But I suspect we would go in December for only two or three days, maybe a week at the most," Sen. Wally Barnett of Lincoln guessed Friday.

The chief advantage of a long recess would be increased "public awareness" of bills prior to their public hearings, Barnett said.

"The public would have time to look into the bills and be ready to participate in the public hearings in January."

Under the current system, the Legislature convenes in January and, in organizational odd-numbered years like 1977, it wastes a good share of its first seven days in session waiting for committee hearings to begin.

Committee hearings on bills may not be held until seven calendar days after the bills are printed.

In 1975, the last organizational session, the Legislative Journal shows that the senators met for 32 minutes on their third day in session, for about an hour and a half for the next three days and for 52 minutes on their seventh day.

In even numbered non-organizational years, the Legislature can hold afternoon sessions to consider holdover bills from the previous year's session while waiting for committee hearings to begin.

Barnett, who is chairman of the Legislative Council's executive board, says a December or January beginning "makes little difference to me."

The Unicameral could employ the recess idea in January just as well as it could in December if it wishes, he noted.

The constitutional change was proposed by the executive board in 1975.

It provides for the Legislature to convene on the second Monday in December rather than the first Wednesday after the first Monday in January.

But the amendment would not disturb the session length limits of 60 and 90 days.

U.S., S. African Talks Progress

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — More progress was reported Sunday after 4½ hours of talks between South African Prime Minister John Vorster and U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger on racial troubles in southern Africa.

However, neither side gave details in a joint statement issued after the session.

Vorster indicated in a press conference before the session that his government is taking a more moderate position on at least one issue being discussed — the future of Namibia, or South-West Africa.

South Africa controls the neighboring territory. It has in the past refused to negotiate with the South-West African People's Organization (SWAPO), the main black nationalist organization in Namibia.

SWAPO, like other black groups, wants independence for Namibia sooner than the 1978 date set by Vorster's government.

Vorster claims SWAPO is Communist-inspired and was founded by outsiders who should have no voice in the territory's future.

But Sunday, he would not rule out the possibility of his government taking part in talks that would include SWAPO among some 20 other South-West African political organizations.

"It is up to the people to decide" what type of government they want, "even if it displeases me," he said. "I don't think it would be wise for South Africa to take part (but) I would have to think it over."

The United States has been pushing for South Africa to engage in talks with SWAPO to avoid a full-scale war there. It is also trying to get Vorster to exert pressure on the neighboring white minority government in Rhodesia to turn over its power to blacks before the war already begun there escalates.

Vorster said in the news conference that peace is still possible in Rhodesia in spite of the growing racial violence. "Even at this stage it is possible to achieve a peaceful solution," he said.

However, Vorster said, it is not South Africa's business to pressure Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith into a quick transfer of power to the majority black population. "I can only assess, point out the realities and give advice," he said.

U.S. officials have said Vorster has pressured Smith privately to moderate his strong opposition to an immediate accommodation with the blacks. South Africa has strong influence on Rhodesia because the Vorster government is Smith's strongest ally.

Vorster refused to answer a reporter who asked if he would curtail military aid to Smith but said, "South Africa does not believe in sanctions and does not believe in boycotts." South Africa is the frequent object of economic or political sanctions because of its policy of apartheid, or racial separation.

Vorster said the racial violence in his own country was having no influence on his talks with Kissinger. A spokesman for Kissinger said the Sunday talks were limited to Namibia and Rhodesia.

Lower-level members of the South African and American delegations were to work on specific issues Sunday afternoon and evening with full-scale, formal talks between Kissinger and Vorster to resume Monday morning.

Moynihan Gets A Pie In The Face

Daniel Patrick Moynihan, left, former ambassador to the United Nations, gets a mocha cream pie in the face from a self-styled Yippie, Aron Kay of New York City. Moynihan was arriving for a walking tour as part of his campaign for the Democratic senatorial nomination. Kay said he hit Moynihan with a pie as a form of protest against his national and international policies.

'Pat' And 'The Hat' Battle Bitterly

NEW YORK (AP) — Rep. Bella "The Hat" Abzug and Daniel "Pat" Moynihan battled bitterly on television Sunday as three other panelists — also rivals for the Democratic senatorial nomination — warned their "broil" was turning off the voters.

Mrs. Abzug repeated charges that Moynihan was an unrepentant supporter of Presidents Nixon and Ford.

She went on to claim he had said he was "sad" to leave his post as the Ford administration's U.S. ambassador to the United Nations because he would have been "glad" to continue support for the president.

Moreover, she claimed, Moynihan had said he would be glad to support former California Gov. Ronald Reagan.

"If you'll say this, you'll say anything," Moynihan snapped to "this lady who sometimes has trouble with her facts."

He denied the new charges and called it "McCarthyism" to say that his 1968-1970 service as Nixon's advisor on urban affairs meant he supported a president "who failed in his fundamental responsibilities to the American people."

Moynihan then lashed into Mrs. Abzug for her brief use of a radio commercial which purported to be a White House tape featuring Nixon and Moynihan.

It was actually made at the Hotel Pierre in New York City before Nixon's inauguration.

Mrs. Abzug withdrew the tape and repeated on the NBC-Sunday Show that "I deplore inaccuracies."

Referring to the tape, and announcing that he had complained to the Federal Election Commission about it, Moynihan said "of all the Nixon dirty tricks, this is as dirty as any."

"I don't think we should have tampered tapes, dirty tricks... Donald Segretti went to prison for that sort of thing."

Mrs. Abzug smiled and said, "I'm very pleased to hear you say for the first time that Mr. Nixon disgraced the Presidency."

The lawyer Congresswoman previously complained of dirty politics when she was accused by a union leader — who supports Moynihan — of being a "scab" for substituting for a teacher who was on strike. She denied the charge, and the union official later said that he couldn't prove it.

Silver-haired Paul O'Dwyer, president of the New York City Council, warned "we'll never be accomplishing anything as long as Mrs. Abzug and Daniel Moynihan continue to broil in such a way they turn off most New York Democrats."

In a gentle voice, former Atty. Gen. Ramsay Clark said "I'm not so much concerned about what it is doing to the Democratic Party as what it is doing to the Democratic process."

"We don't need a bunch of bickering. We don't need name-calling. We need to debate the issues, not personalities."

O'Dwyer added "I believe we haven't added to our stature by what's taken place here."

Firemen Control Pine Ridge Blaze

Chadron (AP) — A stubborn fire that raged through 2,850 acres of the Nebraska National Forest in northwest Nebraska was brought under control Sunday.

But officials said a red flag alert may be called with temperatures forecast to reach 100 degrees Monday and winds up to 20 miles per hour.

Teams continued to mop up the area located in the Pine Ridge Division of the forest and precautions were taken to avoid a rekindling of the blaze.

A U.S. Forest Service plane equipped with an infra-red scanner was ordered to survey the area early Monday.

Bob Wagner, information officer, said the scanner can pick up images of heat sources that might not be visible to the eye. He said it is sensitive enough to pick up heat from small campfires.

Monday morning the fire was to be turned over to Nebraska National Forest personnel and Jim Lees of Chadron was named fire boss.

He will use local forest personnel and a 20-man crew from Crested Butte, Colo. Other personnel were released.

Fire Boss Bob Case said 2,402 acres blackened were Nebraska National Forest land, with the balance owned by private parties. The fire has been raging for about a week and was controlled twice only to be re-kindled again.

Damage estimates remained at $167,000 and the cost to control the fire and clean up may reach $200,000, officials said.

Case said there were no additional injuries reported Saturday and early Sunday, leaving the figure at three smoke inhalation and one injury involving rib fractures.

The fire, believed to have started last Sunday night from lightning, was discovered Monday. The area burned is about 15 miles southwest of Chadron.

Wagner said personnel were beginning to make plans to seed grass in the burn area after the tedious job of mop-up is completed. Mop-up operations will continue well into this week.

Man Dies As Motorcycle Hits Freight On West O

A Lincoln man was killed Sunday night when his motorcycle hit the side of a Burlington Northern freight train on West O St.

The victim was identified as Howard Biegler, 32.

Police said Biegler, apparently westbound, hit the 101-car train about 30 cars from the end. The train was traveling about 12 miles per hour, railroad officials reported.

The man was dragged about 50 feet and his motorcycle about 150 feet by the train. He was dead at the scene, police said.

The 1976 Nebraska highway fatality toll stands at 259 compared with 241 on this date one year ago.

Plane Hits Power Lines

FRASERDALE, Canada (AP) — A single-engine Otter aircraft attempting to land on the Abitibi River in fog crashed Saturday, killing all 10 persons aboard.

A spokesman for the plane's owners said Sunday the victims included officials of the Ontario royal commission on electric power planning.

Ted Nobbs, secretary of Austin Airways, said the plane, equipped with floats, may have been attempting to land because of weather conditions. It was on a charter flight from Moosonee to Timmins.

Provincial police said the plane went down in heavy fog. Nobbs said the pilot, Douglas Norman Clifford, 28, of White River, had been with Austin about 1½ years and had more than 2,000 hours flying time.

Peace Flank Grows
Belfast — Peace rallies in Northern Ireland organized in the last month by two Belfast housewives have stirred more optimism and hope than anyone has seen in the province in years. After a new series of killings in the Belfast area in August, Mairead Corrigan and Betty Williams organized and led a peace march by 10,000 women. A week later 20,000 marched, and the following week people started thinking that there might be something to this "peace movement" after all, and 25,000 joined up.

Allegations Hit Dole
Washington — The former chief lobbyist for the Gulf Oil Corp. has told a federal grand jury that he made an illegal corporate contribution in 1973 to Sen. Robert J. Dole, the Republican vice-presidential nominee, who was then running for re-election, according to sources familiar with the investigation. The money amounted to $5,000 or $6,000, the lobbyist said. A spokesman for Dole said the Senator reviewed his records and found no indication that the money had been received. An independent review of Dole's entire financial report of the 1973-74 campaign also found no trace of a contribution from Gulf. A White House spokesman said that President Ford was aware of the allegations concerning possible illegal contributions from Gulf to Dole before he was chosen as Ford's running mate.

Busing Mood Changing
Chicago — There are signs that hostility to busing for school integration is declining — even in Boston — making civil rights lawyers and leaders and proponents of integration more optimistic than they have been in years. This is a change from their mood of gloom only six months ago when President Ford was actively searching for a way to halt court-ordered busing.

Employment View Gloomy
New York — On this Labor Day, New York labor leaders are generally gloomy about the employment outlook for next year and are pinning their hopes for an economic turnaround on a Democratic administration in Washington. "It's like a big jungle," John Murray, president of Plumbers Local No. 2, said. "Some of my plumbers have been out of work for two years. Right now we don't see any light in the tunnel, maybe no major jobs for another two years. They can't understand why Congress, why their leaders, why somebody doesn't do something about the job situation."

Carter Begins Campaign
Plains, Ga. — On Monday, Jimmy Carter begins a presidential campaign that in some ways will be unusual and innovative, and in some ways will be as old-fashioned as a buggy. The three televised debates that he is scheduled to have with President Ford will probably be a major feature of the campaign, but Carter believes that a "lie" in the debates would be equivalent to a victory for him.

Viking 2 Probes For Marsquakes

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The Viking 2's robot lander began probing for marsquakes Sunday and sent back to Earth color photos of the red field and orange sky over Mars' plain of Utopia.

Mission director Tom Young said all systems aboard the lander checked out "just fine" and that soil sampling experiments should begin late this week.

Meanwhile, the entire seismic experimentation phase was riding on Viking 2 because Viking 1's seismometer failed to work.

"We should be able to see what would be a magnitude 6 earthquake (on the Richter scale)," said Dr. Gary Latham of the project's seismology team, adding that anything weaker might not register. "We're quite encouraged about the prospects. It's as good as many seismological stations on Earth."

Latham said marsquakes are the same strength as earthquakes. Quakes registering 6 have caused severe damage on Earth. The Richter Scale is a measure of ground motion in which each whole number increase represents a tenfold increase in magnitude.

Latham said scientists were glad to be back "with the working experiments," referring to the failure of Viking 1's seismometer.

Viking 2 also gave earthmen a weather report Sunday, logging a noontime temperature in Utopia of 35 degrees below zero, Fahrenheit — about five degrees colder than the resting place of Viking 1.

Scientists said all Viking 2's equipment seemed to be working well and what at first appeared to be a rip on its dis-

Police Chief's Wife Plays Sidekick

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — "Carol, this is Mrs. Callahan. Please don't shoot at my husband," said Carole Callahan as she tried to talk an armed woman out of firing at her husband.

It was the latest incident in which Carole and her police chief husband acted as a team. "I guess you could call them 'Callahan and Wife,'" said police spokesman Tom Brophy.

Brophy's reference was to the television program "MacMillan and Wife," where a fictional police commissioner often is aided by his civilian wife in solving various crimes.

In a real-life incident Saturday evening, the wife of a Fort Lauderdale policeman engaged in an hour-long gun battle with officers and Carole Callahan tried to talk her into stopping.

Brophy identified the woman as Carol Brown, 33, and said she apparently was upset over marital problems.

"It's strange how we got word of this," said Carole Callahan. "Leo has a sixth sense about these things. We were just sitting there, in the living room, doing nothing, when all of a sudden he got up and said, 'You know, I have a feeling something is happening. I'd better turn on the (police) radio.'"

When he did, Callahan discovered that dispatchers were sending more than 50 policemen to the Browns' home.

Police said the incident began when officer Allen Brown, separated from his wife for several weeks, dropped by to visit his children. All four youngsters were out of the house during the incident.

"She (Mrs. Brown) had a mental breakdown and started shooting all over," Brophy said. Brown retreated and called officers for aid. As police arrived, they were met with sporadic gunfire from the house. Other officers spoke with Mrs. Brown, who had a police radio in the home.

"We got to the house and the officers asked me to talk to her, on a woman's level," Mrs. Callahan said.

"Carol," Mrs. Callahan said into the radio as she crouched in a nearby car. "Carol, who's going to take care of your little kids if you aren't going to do it any more?"

"Carol, remember how we used to dress up on the holidays and on Halloween and have so much fun with the kids?"

"Carol, this is Mrs. Callahan, please don't shoot my husband."

As she spoke, Callahan was inching up to the house. Meanwhile, tear gas was being thrown into the home from the other side.

She said she often goes out on calls with her husband, but rarely gets so directly involved.

There was one last thing for her to attend to Saturday night. As Callahan was being admitted to the hospital, she asked the police dispatcher to relay a message.

"Tell the children we'll be late getting back," she said.

Viking 2 Probes For Marsquakes

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The Viking 2's robot lander began probing for marsquakes Sunday and sent back to Earth color photos of the red field and orange sky over Mars' plain of Utopia.

Mission director Tom Young said all systems aboard the lander checked out "just fine" and that soil sampling experiments should begin late this week.

Meanwhile, the entire seismic experimentation phase was riding on Viking 2 because Viking 1's seismometer failed to work.

"We should be able to see what would be a magnitude 6 earthquake (on the Richter scale)," said Dr. Gary Latham of the project's seismology team, adding that anything weaker might not register. "We're quite encouraged about the prospects. It's as good as many seismological stations on Earth."

Latham said marsquakes are the same strength as earthquakes. Quakes registering 6 have caused severe damage on Earth. The Richter Scale is a measure of ground motion in which each whole number increase represents a tenfold increase in magnitude.

Latham said scientists were glad to be back "with the working experiments," referring to the failure of Viking 1's seismometer.

Viking 2 also gave earthmen a weather report Sunday, logging a noontime temperature in Utopia of 35 degrees below zero, Fahrenheit — about five degrees colder than the resting place of Viking 1.

Scientists said all Viking 2's equipment seemed to be working well and what at first appeared to be a rip on its dish-shaped radio antenna may have been a splash of mud. Scientists said the craft may have kicked some dirt onto the scanner during its lopsided landing and that would account for the dark slash-like line on the device.

Young said that Viking 2's complicated gas chromatograph-mass spectrometer experiment was ready to receive its first sample of soil late this week. The spectrometer scans the sample then reports the chemical elements contained in it.

The gas-release experiment will be looking particularly for signs of organic compounds in the red Utopia soil. Those essential compounds seem to be the "missing link" in Viking 1's search for life.

Several of Viking 1's biology experiments have suggested the presence of life, but no organics were actually found.

Scientists had been concerned about Viking 2's seismometer, both because the craft apparently landed quite hard and because the quake-measuring instrument aboard Viking 1 could never be uncaged after Viking 1's landing.

But Sunday, Viking 2 sent word that its seismometer was functional and "quite clearly operating as expected" on the cold slopes of Utopia, said Dr. Gary Latham, a member of the seismology team.

The region was chosen for its relatively smooth surface and because its climate was considered more favorable for finding life, the basic purpose of the Viking missions. Viking 1's life probes have proved inconclusive so far, and scientists say the arid Chryse Basin where the first lander rests may be partly to blame. Utopia, 4,600 miles away, is moister and theoretically more hospitable for life.

But officials said a red flag alert may be called with temperatures forecast to reach 100 degrees Monday and winds up to 20 miles per hour.

Teams continued to mop up the area located in the Pine Ridge Division of the forest and precautions were taken to avoid a rekindling of the blaze.

A U.S. Forest Service plane equipped with an infra-red scanner was ordered to survey the area early Monday.

Bob Wagner, information officer, said the scanner can pick up images of heat sources that might not be visible to the eye. He said it is sensitive enough to pick up heat from small campfires.

Monday morning the fire was to be turned over to Nebraska National Forest personnel and Jim Lees of Chadron was named fire boss.

He will use local forest personnel and a 20-man crew from Crested Butte, Colo. Other personnel were released.

Fire Boss Bob Case said 2,402 acres blackened were Nebraska National Forest land, with the balance owned by private parties. The fire has been raging for about a week and was controlled twice only to be rekindled again.

Damage estimates remained at $167,000 and the cost to control the fire and clean up may reach $200,000, officials said.

Case said there were no additional injuries reported Saturday and early Sunday, leaving the figure at three smoke inhalation and one injury involving rib fractures.

The fire, believed to have started last Sunday night from lightning, was discovered Monday. The area burned is about 15 miles southwest of Chadron.

Wagner said personnel were beginning to make plans to seed grass in the burn area after the tedious job of mop-up is completed. Mop-up operations will continue well into this week.

Man Dies As Motorcycle Hits Freight On West O

A LINCOLN man was killed Sunday night when his motorcycle hit the side of a Burlington Northern freight train on West O St.

The victim was identified as Howard Biegler, 32.

Police said Biegler, apparently westbound, hit the 101-car train about 30 cars from the end. The train was traveling about 12 miles per hour, railroad officials reported.

The man was dragged about 50 feet and his motorcycle about 150 feet by the train. He was dead at the scene, police said.

The 1976 Nebraska highway fatality toll stands at 259 compared with 241 on this date one year ago.

Plane Hits Power Lines

FRASERDALE, Canada (AP) — A single-engine Otter aircraft attempting to land on the Abitibi River in fog crashed Saturday, killing all 10 persons aboard.

A spokesman for the plane's owners said Sunday the victims included officials of the Ontario royal commission on electric power planning.

Ted Nobbs, secretary of Austin Airways, said the plane, equipped with floats, may have been attempting to land because of weather conditions. It was on a charter flight from Moosonee to Timmins.

Provincial police said the plane went down in heavy fog. Nobbs said the pilot, Douglas Norman Clifford, 28, of White River, had been with Austin about 1½ years and had more than 2,000 hours flying time.

Police Chief's Wife Plays Sidekick

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — "Carol, this is Mrs. Callahan. Please don't shoot at my husband," said Carol Callahan as she tried to talk an armed woman out of firing at her husband.

It was the latest incident in which Carol and her police chief husband acted as a team. "I guess you could call them 'Callahan and Wife,'" said police spokesman Tom Brophy.

Brophy's reference was to the television program "MacMillan and Wife," where a fictional police commissioner often is aided by his civilian wife in solving various crimes.

In a real-life incident Saturday evening, the wife of a Fort Lauderdale policeman engaged in an hour-long gun battle with officers and Carol Callahan tried to talk her into stopping.

Brophy identified the woman as Carol Brown, 33, and said she apparently was upset over marital problems.

"It's strange how we got word of this," said Carol Callahan. "Leo has a sixth sense about these things. We were just sitting there, in the living room, doing nothing, when all of a sudden he got up and said, 'You know, I have a feeling something is happening. I'd better turn on the (police) radio.'"

When he did, Callahan discovered that dispatchers were sending more than 50 policemen to the Browns' home.

Police said the incident began when officer Allen Brown, separated from his wife for several weeks, dropped by to visit his children. All four youngsters were out of the house during the incident.

"She (Mrs. Brown) had a mental breakdown and started shooting all over," Brophy said. Brown retreated and called officers for aid. As police arrived, they were met with sporadic gunfire from the house. Other officers spoke with Mrs. Brown, who had a police radio in the home.

"We got to the house and the officers asked me to talk to her, on a woman's level," Mrs. Callahan said.

"Carol," Mrs. Callahan said into the radio as she crouched in a nearby car. "Carol, who's going to take care of your little kids if you aren't going to do it any more?"

"Carol, remember how we used to dress up on the holidays and on Halloween and have so much fun with the kids?"

"Carol, this is Mrs. Callahan, please don't shoot my husband."

As she spoke, Callahan was inching up to the house. Meanwhile, tear gas was being thrown into the home from the other side.

Callahan fell and broke his collar bone. Minutes later, Mrs. Brown, overcome by the tear gas, ran out of the house.

The woman was taken to a hospital's psychiatric ward for observation. Seven policemen were treated for tear gas injuries and released from a local hospital. Callahan was reported in fair condition.

"Carol Brown and I weren't friends exactly, but we met many times at the station," said Mrs. Callahan.

She said she often goes out on calls with her husband, but rarely gets so directly involved.

There was one last thing for her to attend to Saturday night. As Callahan was being admitted to the hospital, she asked the police dispatcher to relay a message.

"Tell the children we'll be late getting back," she said.

Care Helps Prevent Drycleaning Damage

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

The drycleaner may not be to blame! Even if damage is caused during drycleaning, the fault may not actually lie with the drycleaner who was the last person to handle the garment. It may be the manufacturer, the retailer or the consumer.

According to the Better Business Bureau Consumer Information division and the International Fabricare Institute, if the cleaner is to blame, the consumer is then entitled to recover the value of the garment's remaining life expectancy.

The National Fair Claims Guide for Consumer Textile Products has issued guidelines from the International Fabricare Institute, of certain life expectancies assigned to all categories of textile products.

For example, suits are expected to last two to four years, dresses from one to five years, coats four years and dress shirts two years.

Tables in the guide show how to determine the worth of a product on the basis of the unused portion of the garment's life expectancy in combination with its condition at the time it is lost or ruined.

The consumer must negotiate an adjustment with the cleaner if the liability rests with him.

But the manufacturer may be at fault. If at the time of purchase the information required by government regulations is not supplied and the item suffers damage in subsequent cleaning because of lack of this information, the liability for damages rests with the manufacturer.

However, it is often difficult for the consumer to know who the manufacturer is. The Better Business Bureau recommends the consumer bring his or her problem to the attention of the retailer. Good retail practice has always required that a store exchange an deficient item or refund the price.

If the information was available to the consumer but he or she did not follow it, then the responsibility rests with the consumer.

But if the drycleaner fails to follow label instructions or the information supplied him by the consumer or does not exercise reasonable care, then the fault lies with him.

To avoid possible problems with drycleaners, the consumer should furnish the drycleaner with information on labels or tags removed at the time of purchase.

When it is not apparent or clearly labeled, the Better Business Bureau recommends telling the cleaner about any special fiber content of the garment.

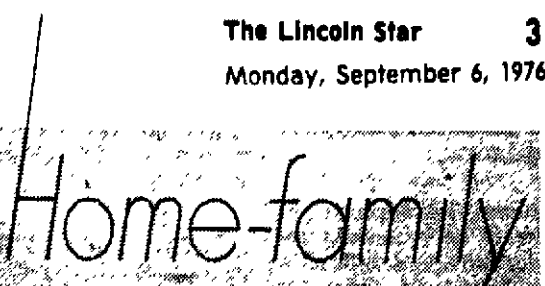

The cleaning establishment should also be informed as to spots — what was spilled on the garment — whether they are visible or not.

Knits that shrink can be stretched back to size and reshaped if this service is requested. Sizing, which is applied at the time of manufacture to give a garment shape or body, may be removed during one or more cleanings.

This is also true of water repellent or resistant and spot resistant finishes. If the consumer desires these be restored to the garment, he or she should make this specific request to the cleaner.

In the case of buttons or ornaments, the consumer may take the trouble to remove them or at least warn the cleaners about the presence of glue, plastics or cardboard stiffeners.

Accessories normally worn with an outfit, such as belts, should be cleaned at the same time to avoid any possible color incompatibility resulting from cleaning.

Is Drycleaning Always Right?

©The New York Times

New York — Pasted to a window or a wall in most drycleaning establishments is a sign that reads, "Everything Dry Cleans Better." But as the racks of dry-cleaning failures in the laboratory of the Neighborhood Dry Cleaners Association show, some garments can't be dry cleaned at all.

Why, then, the slogan, which is part of an association program?

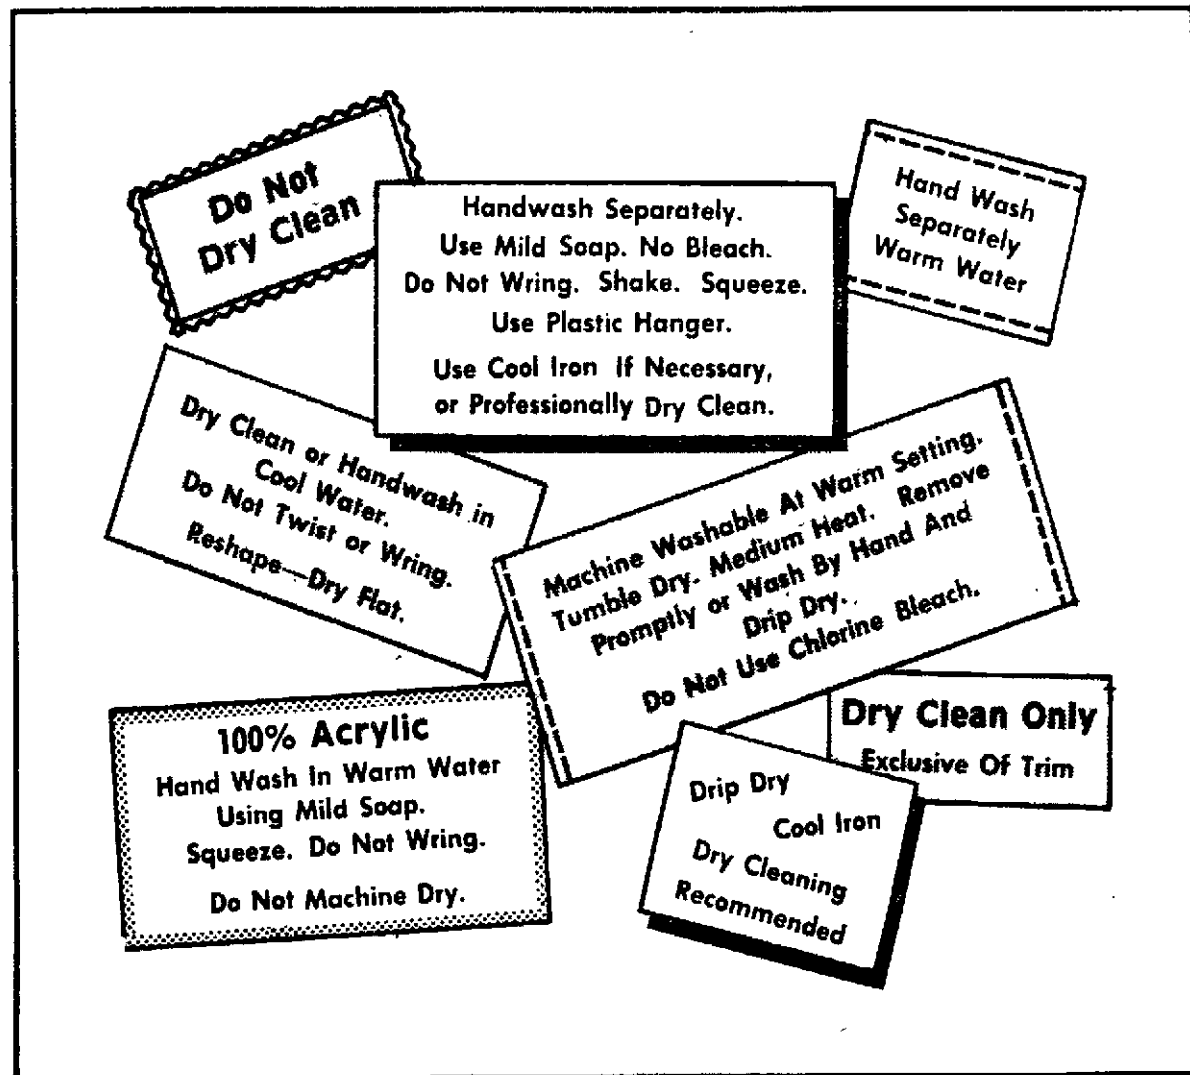

William Seitz, executive director of the association, replied, "We developed the program about five years ago at the time when polyester clothing was becoming extremely popular. The labels in that clothing all said 'Washable,' and although that is supposed to mean that they can be dry cleaned too, we found that most consumers thought the clothes could not be dry cleaned. That's why we started the program."

Seitz contended that dry cleaning was gentler to most fabrics than washing and could prolong the life of garments, but he acknowledged that there were exceptions — witness the garments in the association's laboratory. "But those are either improperly made or not labeled to say 'Do Not Dry Clean,'" he said.

Some fabrics, for that matter, he pointed out, can be neither dry cleaned nor washed. One example, he said, is Herculon, a fabric used in upholstered furniture. It can only be wiped with a damp cloth. Washing shrinks it and dry cleaning dissolves its rubberized backing, he said.

G.J. Erynei, who is Consumers Union's expert on textiles, said he believed that some clothing produced today was virtually uncleanable and unwashable.

"If you have a pair of jeans with a label that says 'Wash only in cold water with mild soap,' that won't effectively remove the soil that normally gets into a pair of jeans," he said. "Manufacturers should be required to tell the public not only what procedure won't harm a garment but also what will get it clean."

Labels Give Garment Life Clues

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

Buying new clothes involves more than selecting the desired style, fit and color.

Clothing is expensive and becomes more costly if care is not taken in cleaning or laundering garments. The time to begin thinking about clothing care is when you make the purchase.

Garments now contain information on how they should be washed or cleaned so time should be taken to inspect those labels and tags for maximum life of a garment.

Garments which are both washable and drycleanable may be labeled washable with no mention of drycleanability. However, those labeled washable generally also can be drycleaned.

But consumers should be alert to problems which can arise with some fabrics when they are drycleaned, according to a Better Business Bureau publication.

It is advisable to ask the sales person at the time a garment is purchased about any special cleaning requirements.

Many fabrics lack durability and should be purchased only if the consumer is aware of their limitations. Such fabrics include cashmere, camel hair, mohair and some of the very loosely-woven lightweight woolen fabrics that have a tendency to snag.

Suede is a fabric with high incidence of color difficulties. Genuine leather and suede require special processing to preserve finish, feel and color, and should be handled only by cleaners equipped for this type of cleaning.

Imitation suede and leather, which often become stiff in drycleaning, are generally accepted for drycleaning at the owner's risk.

Some imitation Persian lamb also presents problems. In some cases, the curls are held to a plain weave background with an adhesive, which may dissolve in cleaning solvent.

However, when the curls on such imitation fur are sewn into the background, the garment usually drycleans safely.

Some bonded fabrics may also prove to be a disappointment. There have been cases of partial or complete separation of the face from the lining fabric, and of shrinking, puckering, stiffening, and adhesive staining.

Polyester knits often lack the heat sensitivity and fabric stability of woven goods and are susceptible to shrinkage and snagging. Acrylic knits are inclined to stretch when steamed.

Since it is impossible for a consumer to determine by looking at a fabric whether the color of the garment will withstand the rigors of exposure to sunlight as well as various spotting agents or chemicals, the consumer should read labels and tags carefully and ask questions of salespeople to avoid major problems.

Colors are applied either as dyes which are absorbed into fibers or as pigments which adhere to the fabric surface, and both types are usually colorfast.

However, some colors will fade in water and not in drycleaning solvent, and vice versa; others are not colorfast in either water or solvent.

Some colors rub off when they come in contact with something else while others may withstand one or two cleanings and then run or fade as their hold on the fiber lessens.

And fume fading or fading, which results when certain types of dyes in some acetate and wool materials are subjected to combustion gases commonly present in the home, may become apparent after drycleaning but may not be caused by that process.

Gilt prints and some pigment prints are only skin deep and loss of color through use or through cleaning process means loss of design.

In addition to fabric and color, the consumer should also be concerned with how buttons, sequins, beads and other decorations will hold up during the drycleaning process.

DEAR ABBY: My only grandchildren (a boy, 14, and a girl, 15) live in a distant state, and I always remember them handsomely at Christmastime.

Last March I received a letter from their mother (my daughter-in-law) that said, "Barby and Sonny have asked me to thank you for your fabulous Christmas gifts, and they're terribly ashamed that they never got around to thanking you themselves."

I replied to that letter as follows: "As far as I'm concerned, Barby and Sonny have not as yet acknowledged my Christmas gifts properly, furthermore, they are old enough to write their own thank-you notes, and it's high time they learned some manners."

Next thing I knew, I got a snippy letter from my daughter-in-law, saying, "If you're going to make such a big deal out of thank-you notes, please don't send the children any more presents."

Opening lead — three of clubs.

It's not easy to figure out how South went down one in this deal played many years ago. But the fact is that he did go down — and it all came about quite naturally, as we shall presently see.

North's double of three clubs was for takeout, indicating values well above a minimum opening bid. South's voluntary four spade bid was therefore fully justified.

East won the opening club lead with the queen and saw that the prospect of getting four tricks on defense was not very bright. He could expect to win a heart trick, all right, but to count on West for two trump tricks was not very realistic in view of South's four-spade bid.

East therefore decided that his only real chance to stop the contract was to return a heart, acting to all intents and purposes like a man with a singleton heart. Accordingly, he played the six of hearts at trick two. Declarer took West's ten in dummy with the jack and thereupon led a trump to the king, won by West with the ace.

West returned a heart and South, afraid that East was about to ruff, finessed the queen. It was difficult for declarer to conceive that East, at trick two, had led a heart into dummy from four to the king.

East won the queen of hearts with the king, returned a heart, and South surprisingly found himself going down one. He lost a club, a spade, a heart and a heart ruff. East's shrewd defense had paid off exceptionally well.

It simply goes to show that even contracts that appear to be ironclad will sometimes develop unexpected weak spots that can be exploited by imaginative defense.

Sewing Wardrobe Aids Back-To-School Budgets

(c) Chicago Sun-Times

Want your child to be as well dressed as his or her classmates, but don't want to spend a great deal of money on clothes? Sew a back-to-school wardrobe for the youngster.

By investing in the latest multi-purpose patterns, scanning remnant tables and shopping fabric sales, a child's wardrobe can be sewn for a fraction of the price of retail clothes.

Be sure to match fall styles to suitable fabrics. Stretchable knits are necessary for T-shirts and pull-on dresses and slacks.

Carduroy, denim, flannelette and washable wool are sturdy choices for jumpers, aprons and overalls. Cotton or flannel plaid are the trend for sporty shirts. Chambray, poplin or double knits are suggested for skirts. Brushed denim is a wise choice for leisure suits. Easy-care dark cottons are best for dresses.

There is another advantage to being able to sew.

Last year's school clothes can be altered to fit this year. Let down hems. Camouflage holes or stains with whimsical appliques. Lengthen trousers with add-on pieces of fabric. And transform too short dresses into pant tops.

New children's fashion patterns will help stretch the family clothing budget this fall.

Some bonded fabrics may also prove to be a disappointment. There have been cases of partial or complete separation of the face from the lining fabric, and of shrinking, puckering, stiffening, and adhesive staining.

Polyester knits often lack the heat sensitivity and fabric stability of woven goods and are susceptible to shrinkage and snagging. Acrylic knits are inclined to stretch when steamed.

Since it is impossible for a consumer to determine by looking at a fabric whether the color of the garment will withstand the rigors of exposure to sunlight as well as various spotting agents or chemicals, the consumer should read labels and tags carefully and ask questions of salespeople to avoid major problems.

Colors are applied either as dyes which are absorbed into fibers or as pigments which adhere to the fabric surface, and both types are usually colorfast.

However, some colors will fade in water and not in drycleaning solvent, and vice versa; others are not colorfast in either water or solvent.

Some colors rub off when they come in contact with something else while others may withstand one or two cleanings and then run or fade as their hold on the fiber lessens.

And fume fading or fading, which results when certain types of dyes in some acetate and wool materials are subjected to combustion gases commonly present in the home, may become apparent after drycleaning but may not be caused by that process.

Gilt prints and some pigment prints are only skin deep and loss of color through use or through cleaning process means loss of design.

In addition to fabric and color, the consumer should also be concerned with how buttons, sequins, beads and other decorations will hold up during the drycleaning process.

Sewing Wardrobe Aids Back-To-School Budgets

(c) Chicago Sun-Times

Want your child to be as well dressed as his or her classmates, but don't want to spend a great deal of money on clothes? Sew a back-to-school wardrobe for the youngster.

By investing in the latest multi-purpose patterns, scanning remnant tables and shopping fabric sales, a child's wardrobe can be sewn for a fraction of the price of retail clothes.

Be sure to match fall styles to suitable fabrics. Stretchable knits are necessary for T-shirts and pull-on dresses and slacks.

Corduroy, denim, flannelette and washable wool are sturdy choices for jumpers, aprons and overalls. Cotton or flannel plaid are the trend for sporty shirts. Chambray, poplin or double knits are suggested for skirts. Brushed denim is a wise choice for leisure suits. Easy-care dark cottons are best for dresses.

There is another advantage to being able to sew.

Last year's school clothes can be altered to fit this year. Let down hems. Camouflage holes or stains with whimsical appliques. Lengthen trousers with add-on pieces of fabric. And transform too short dresses into pant tops.

New children's fashion patterns will help stretch the family clothing budget this fall.

Vet School Options

To insure the maximum opportunity for students in their own states, legislatures in Oklahoma and Colorado have voided agreements with Nebraska whereby Nebraska veterinary medicine students attend schools in the former two states at resident tuition rates while this state helps to cover the cost.

With Oklahoma and Colorado now denying Nebraska veterinary medicine students guaranteed, subsidized slots, the number of states having such contracts with Nebraska has dwindled to four. Only about 15 slots in out-of-state schools will be available each year under remaining agreements.

And with other states with vet schools likely to look after the best interests of their own students, and with a possible trend toward regional schools (Colorado State University is now serving a region including New Mexico and Arizona; one of the reasons Colorado dropped the agreement with Nebraska), Nebraska students interested in veterinary medicine may be denied adequate access to an education in that field. There may not be a sufficient number trained to meet the demand here.

The alternatives would be the development of a vet school here under the auspices of this state only or a joint-venture veterinary medicine school, possibly to be located in Lincoln, supported by the five states of the Old West region — Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota, Wyoming and Montana.

Although Gov. Jim Exon supports the regional school approach with the college located in Lincoln, general support across the state for an investment in a veterinary medicine school either on our own or in partnership seems to be lacking up to this point. In many quarters, the cost is seen as too high and there are questions about the demand for veterinarians here.

The NU Board of Regents will discuss the veterinary medicine problem — specifically the cancelled contracts — at a meeting later this week. Representatives to the Old West Regional Commission, including Gov. Exon, will meet in Great Falls, Mont. next month for further talks on the regional concept.

With lawmakers in Wyoming and Montana talking about joining the Colorado-New Mexico-Arizona region, perhaps a united Old West regional effort is doomed.

It does little good to reflect on Nebraska's lack of vision decades ago in not creating a veterinary medicine school. It is apparent that needs here have always been met elsewhere.

But those "elsewheres" are drying up. Opportunities for Nebraskans to attend schools in other states on a resident tuition-subsidized basis are diminishing. A determination of what effect this will have on the future supply of doctors of veterinary medicine in Nebraska should now rate a higher priority. Perhaps the costs involved will now be seen in a different perspective.

Not A Bad Life

Despite an uncertain job climate and inflation which ravages the paycheck, the American working man and woman are still the envy of the wage-earners of the world.

The myth may be a little tattered or jaded by now. The working man may be bored or otherwise at odds with his expectations, apprehensive about his future, angered at the flight of his take-home pay and perhaps unmindful of the advantages he has compared to those fewer enjoyed by wage-earners before him.

But all things considered, the system he works within, the standard of living he enjoys, the unsurpassed benefits and opportunities, the American working man is still well ahead of the pack.

Organized, American labor is the strongest pressure group in the nation, an awesome force politically and economically, one which should be checked and balanced.

There are still slaves in America slaves to easy credit, slaves because of a lack of opportunity or ability, because of discrimination. But as a class, the wage-earner in this nation is no longer in bondage, and he hasn't been for decades.

The ascension of the working man to a position of predominance in this society is the American success story.

JAMES RESTON

WASHINGTON — In the forthcoming debates between President Ford and Governor Carter, the President will begin with several obvious advantages. Elected or not, he is the president, and in any dispute between them on issues of fact, the tendency of most uncommitted television viewers will be to give the President, with all his superior access to the government's vast store of information and intelligence, the benefit of the doubt.

Carter says he will debate "aggressively" while being "very respectful" of the presidency, but in the cut and thrust of debate, they are not on equal terms. A president can be "aggressive" and even humiliate his challenger, but Carter has to be more careful. If he presses his points too far and "humiliates" the President, he risks the resentment of the vast television audience that might determine the outcome of the election.

Ford has other advantages. He is a more familiar and popular American type than Carter: a big physical man with the easy swinging gait of an athlete, and the voice of a train-caller. Carter is lean, small, and quiet, and makes his points, not with wide windmill sweeps of his arms, but with short movements of delicate hands, and a thin almost confidential trailing voice.

These may seem to be irrelevant and even silly, frivolous points, and in truth there really is something odd and irrelevant in risking so much on the cosmetic and debating qualities of presidential candidates. But in the theatrical world of politics and television, appearance in a campaign can be more important than the substance of governing a country.

Even so, these debates may be more of an opportunity for Carter than a problem. So much has been said about his "inexperience", his religion, his family, his ambition, his tactical political skill, his "Southernness", and his "newness", that the nation has had little opportunity to test his character, intelligence and knowledge of the nation and the world against Ford's.

The debates will provide this test, and the nation owes a debt to the League of Women Voters for making the test possible. After all, this league of women was on to the tricks of men and politicians long before Gloria Steinem and even Bella Abzug were born, but they still haven't defined the critical rules of the debates.

The first debate will be on domestic affairs, the second on foreign and defense policy, and the third, a free-for-all. But who will moderate the debates? What reporters will question Ford and Carter? Why newspaper and television reporters, who will tend to question the past and present conflicts rather than others who might concentrate on the future? How to keep the audience at the debates from demonstrating for Ford or Carter, and what to do if they don't? These questions still have to be resolved.

How they are resolved is highly important. For they could be decisive about where we are going and who is going to lead us into the future, or they could loiter down into an angry divisive argument about the Hoover Depression, the Nixon Scandals, the big spenders and leaders of the Democratic Party, Wilbur Mills, Wayne Hays, Spiro Agnew, and other disasters.

Fortunately, President Ford and Governor Carter chose serious men to negotiate the terms of the debates. Bill Ruckelshaus and Dean Burch for the President, and Jody Powell and Barry Jagoda for Governor Carter compromised their differences in two sessions, but it is still not clear whether the debates will concentrate on the programs of the future or on the divisions of the past.

The speeches in the primary elections and in the conventions were not reassuring. Each blamed the other party for the predicaments of unemployment, inflation and all the other trouble at home and abroad. Both agreed that the American people were disenchanted with all politicians, and longed for unity at home and peace abroad, but they could not agree about how this new consensus was to be achieved. Maybe the debates of the candidates will clarify this division in the nation, but nobody can be sure. We need to know, not what the President and the governor think about the past, but about what visions and policies they have for the last years of the seventies.

What do they propose about the America of our children? What visions do they have about the years between now and the end of the century? What about energy policy, health policy, education policy, and the anxieties of the young and the very old?

This is what we'd like to hear from Ford and Carter in the debates: a serious even if troubled inquiry about the coming years rather than debating points about the mistakes of the past, which are large enough to cover us all.

RUSSELL BAKER

The Summah Was A Teddible Boah

NEW YORK — For summer we went to the islands. Everyone said they were so much more well-bred than the swamps and not half so dressy as the Hamptons, and besides everyone we knew was going to the Hamptons, which was a bore.

Everyone else we knew was on the islands when we got there, and we all congratulated ourselves on not having gone to the hills. Afterward we went to the beach where I was run over by an automobile while dozing on the sand.

We joked about it in the evening having cocktails at the Simpsons', and everybody said I would have had far fewer fractures if I had gone to the New Jersey Turnpike. On the islands, the wit was intense. Everyone attributed it to the good air and the less dressy ambience.

We had dinner at the Bartleby's and met the Cardozos, and then had dinner at the Cardozos' and met the Bartleby's. Bartleby enchanted us all by telling us we were the kind of people who could make a million dollars if we sincerely wanted wealth, which none of us did, because wealth was such an uncouth aspiration. Afterward we felt splendid about our indifference to materialism and went to

The King's Dory for Sazeracs and Irish coffee and to look at famous writers letting their hair down.

Next day we had lunch at the Hazeltines' and met the Bartleby's, the Cardozos and the Simpsons, who were terribly distraught because their daughter had been run over by a car while dozing on the beach. Hazeltine, who wanted people to talk about him instead of the Simpsons, got a fishbone caught in his throat in the middle of lunch and had to be rushed to the hospital.

One day we heard from the Hemphills that the Arians were on the islands, with one of the Kennedys, or perhaps Jean-Paul Sartre. This was shocking news, for the Arians never came to the islands, but always went to the islands. The Arians' taste for the inlands, in fact, was so pronounced that they never even went to the Hamptons, although both were extremely dressy.

Hazeltine was so distressed about having the conversation turned from himself that he went swimming and came back with a large shark bite, which he insisted on showing us right in the middle of cocktails. Nobody believed him, of course, and at dinner at Dr. Vetch's that night we learned that he had actually been run over by a car dragging a shark carcass while he was dozing on the beach.

One night after we had all been dancing at the Yacht Club, the Eckerts had too much to drink and took off all their clothes and waltzed in the nude to impress Jean-Paul Sartre, who, someone had told them, was seated at the Commodore's table. The police came and reminded the Eckerts that these were not the Hamptons, but the islands, and would probably have arrested them on the spot except for an emergency call to the beach where the Bartleby's had just been run over by an automobile.

At the Cardozos' outdoor dinner that weekend we met the Lees, who usually went to the Keys and were overdressed for the islands, which made them feel gauche. There was a good bit of talk about them at the Simpsons' dinner next night. Eckert said he couldn't stand people who overdressed on the islands, and Bartleby said he could forgive their being overdressed, but could never forgive their having felt gauche about it.

Inflamed at having the entire evening spent on discussions of the Lees, Hazeltine left in a huff to look for Jean-Paul Sartre and ran over Dr. Vetch who was lying on the beach to perfect his moon tan.

As the summer wore on, we sensed the need for dramatic complication. Cardozo tried to supply it by flying off to the Cape for a fling with the widow from Mount Kisco, but the moment turned to dross when we heard they had both been run over by a car while dozing on the beach at Truro.

The Bartleby's took up Zen, the Eckerts took to giving Monday brunches on their patio, the Simpsons took to wearing Ronald Reagan teshirts to the A & P and Hazeltine began disguising himself as Jean-Paul Sartre and sitting around the King's Dory letting his hair down over Sazeracs.

It was quite hopeless. Nothing worked, and summer was ending, and so, one day, after cocktails at the Cardozos' we all went to the beach and lay down and dozed, and a car ran over us.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE

The Pet Rock Avalanche

NEW YORK — And now . . . for the next episode in our continuing saga of Pet Rocks . . .

When we last left our little friends, they were the hottest things on the retail shelf, the ultimate purchase for shoppers willing to toss away the better part of a $5 bill on a frivolous impulse.

Make that purchases, plural. Because once you acquired your Pet Rock, you couldn't just let it be around, neglected. You had to outfit it. And for a buck-fifty each, the Betsy Rock Company in Dallas could provide you with all the "in" accessories.

There were tiny silk nightgowns (guaranteed to be "sensual") and, if your rock liked to sleep around, a matching sleeping bag with a color-coordinated pillow. For stay-at-home, a blanket and pillow set. In cheerful accents of orange, green and lilacwest.

I know this because, in a scholarly treatise reeking with psychological insight into why some fads fade and others flourish foolishly, I tabulated the various Pet Rock accessories. And back from Dallas came an assortment of "the latest in Pet Rock fashions." Neatly packaged in little plastic bags.

Including (are you ready for this?) two wisps of hair labeled "wig" and "toupee." Baldness seems to be a pesky problem with this breed of pet.

And not the only one, apparently. Because there is now a bi-monthly Pet Rock News, full of handy-dignity hints on the care and feeding of you-know-what. Subscription, $5.

But for that you get what you've always wanted: a free membership in POPRI (Friends of Pet Rocks International) and a handsome certificate, suitable for framing.

The current issue deals with a weighty problem: should you hug your Pet Rock to work with you? The gist of it seems to be that most rocks are happier left at home, far from the "jungle of telephones, the clatter of typewriters and the raucous laughter around the water cooler."

To a creature "more attuned to the quiet of a forest glen," the editors warn, noisy companions can cause "severe psychological and neurological damage in the most hardened rock." Might even bring on an extreme case of the grins.

But maybe somebody sold you a flaky find, a rare type that craves constant human companionship. Check your chunk for telltale signs of "chipping, mottling and even a slight cracking." If it has any of these symptoms, you'd better keep your devotee on your desk.

Another article explores in depth the question of a burial plot for your boulder. Forget it. Chances are it will outlive you, anyway. But provide for its care in your will. One suggestion: "have your rock serve as a marker on your grave."

Moving right along, we come (as you knew we would sooner or later) to the sex life of your pet. Most owners are "incomparably negligent" in this regard, and the newsletter prints up explicit instructions:

"Take it for a walk in the woods, turn it loose and walk away. Or turn your back for 15 minutes. Even less, if your rock is the lush type. And no peeing. Rocks are shy and sensitive; even a hint of voyeurism dials their desire."

Which brings us to the latest wrinkle, the Missouri Stud Rock, guaranteed to "propagate at the drop of a pebble." It likes to be cuddled, but don't, the instructions caution, "turn your back on him."

They delicately skip over the way you tell a girl rock from a boy rock, but presumably the Stud knows. They do mention that the favorable breeding period for a female is "between six months and six million years."

Six weeks after the seduction (in a color-coordinated sleeping bag?) you "bash the female rock into travel and the life cycle begins anew."

If your Stud Rock seems sluggish, the owner's manual says he can always be aroused with pictures of the Grand Canyon. (How about one of those silk nightgowns from Dallas?)

It's enough to make you wonder if Pet Rocks (or their owners) are all they're cracked up to be. Just pondering the social significance of the situation is enough to drive you to drink.

Without ice, of course. "The alternative," according to rock psychiatrists, "is too traumatic to even consider."

Poll: Ford's Philosophy Is Closer To Public's Views

By LOUIS HARRIS
The voters may have given Jimmy Carter a sizable lead over Gerald Ford at this point in the campaign, but they seem to feel that the President's, rather than Carter's, political philosophy is closer to their own.

This would seem to be a disadvantage for Carter, but he manages to offset it by coming across as more conservative to conservative voters, more middle of the road to middle of the roaders, and more liberal to liberals. He has demonstrated a remarkable ability to make voters of each ideological stripe believe he is one of their own. This may be changing, however. In the month after Carter was nominated, the number of voters who view him as "liberal" went up from 20 to 26%, while those describing him as "conservative" dropped from 19 to 17%, and "middle of the road" from 38 to 31%. The 57% majority who thought that Carter was either a moderate or conservative in July declined to 48% in August.

At the same time, 72% of the electorate sees President Ford as either "conservative" (36%) or "middle of the road" (36%). By contrast, only 5% think he is a "liberal." Voters see him as slightly less conservative with the passage of time.

Louis Harris
Carter Offsets Disadvantage

All of this becomes quite revealing when it is seen in the light of how voters view themselves. Thirty-one per cent view themselves as conservative, 41% as middle of the road, 18% as liberal, and 3% as radical left.

Carter's knack for appealing to different groups can be seen in these findings: Although 17% of all voters think he is a conservative, a higher 24% of conservatives see him as one of their own. Compared to the 31% of the country, which identifies Carter as middle of the road, a much higher 39% of the middle of the roaders think Carter shares their views. While 26% of all voters consider Carter liberal, a much higher 39% of all liberals do.

Whether Carter can continue to achieve this kind of differing appeal to different segments of the political spectrum may be one of the keys to the ultimate outcome of the election.

Ironically, the biggest disparity in the perception of Carter's political philosophy exists in the South, where he holds a commanding 68 to 28% lead. In the South, 38% of the voters view themselves as conservatives and another 36% as middle of the road. Yet, only 19% of southerners believe Carter to be conservative, while 26% think of him as middle of the road. And although only 12% of all southerners see themselves as liberals, 29% believe Carter is liberal. In the South, Carter will be testing regional pride and loyalty against considerable differences over political philosophy.

Past Harris Surveys have shown that such neat classifications as "liberal" or "conservative" no longer fit political thinking in this country.

Politicians and political journalists tend to see far more significance in ideology than the public does. A recent Harris Survey showed that only 43% of the American people preferred to choose a candidate for President on the basis of his ideology, while the rest of the electorate votes according to which candidate will most improve the quality of life.

Huahine — The trading schooners made their weekly call at Huahine this sunny morning and everybody in Fare village turned out. The village is seven or eight Chinese stores. Surprisingly they have as much variety as Macy's and Safeway combined.

You can buy bread and corned beef. Cold beer, bicycle parts and volley balls. The overseas Cantonese are the storekeepers of the South Pacific.

We're 40 minutes by Air from Tahiti. Since it costs $26 one way, most island people ride the trading schooners. They take 10 hours overnight. The cost is $4.

The islanders jam them to the gunwales. Eat on deck. Sleep on the deck. Sing and play ukuleles and talk, talk. The altogether intimacy Tahitians adore.

"You and I like a room to ourselves," said Muk McCullum of the Bali Hai. "But if you gave Tahitians a choice, they'd want everybody living, sleeping and eating in one room."

Muk is one of the famous three: Kelley, Carlisle and McCullum. They began with the Bali Hai on the island of Moorea. Parlayed to the Bali Hai on Raiatea. Now on Huahine.

The breeze blows through open dining rooms under bamboo and woven pandanus thatch. The waitresses are barefoot. They wear a wraparound pareu that has the coverage of a bath towel but somehow manages modesty.

These are Les-Iles-Sous-Le-Vent — the Islands-Under-The-Wind. In the evening we take a cold glass of Hinano beer and watch the sun go down over Raiatea across the water.

The sun goes fast this close to the equator. White clouds that have been floating in a blue French banknote sky turn grey. The sun edges them with pure gold. The gold falls on Raiatea's hills. It was a holy island in old Polynesia. The temples — the marae — are now only piles of stone. But no islander would walk on them for anything in the world.

"We had an American woman who had a house here on Huahine," said Muk, "and she came down with a mysterious fever. Had all sorts of tests over in Papeete hospital. Doctors simply couldn't put a finger on it.

"Finally the old people here asked a tahua, a Tahitian priest of the old style. They still have them though the islanders all go to Christian churches.

"So he said: 'In the road you've been building, you accidentally put in a tiki.'"

Stone tikis can cause terrible trouble. In the tourist stories you can buy wooden tikis — the god statue. But the old stone tikis are the living god.

Muk said: "They looked in the road fill and sure enough they found a tiki. They moved it and set it up some place else. And the woman got well."

The 57% majority who thought that Carter was either a moderate or conservative in July declined to 48% in August.

At the same time, 72% of the electorate sees President Ford as either "conservative" (36%) or "middle of the road" (36%). By contrast, only 5% think he is a "liberal." Voters see him as slightly less conservative with the passage of time.

All of this becomes quite revealing when it is seen in the light of how voters view themselves. Thirty-one per cent view themselves as conservative, 41% as middle of the road, 18% as liberal, and 3% as radical left.

Carter's knack for appealing to different groups can be seen in these findings: Although 17% of all voters think he is a conservative, a higher 24% of conservatives see him as one of their own. Compared to the 31% of the country, which identifies Carter as middle of the road, a much higher 39% of the middle of the roaders think Carter shares their views. While 28% of all voters consider Carter liberal, a much higher 39% of all liberals do.

Whether Carter can continue to achieve this kind of differing appeal to different segments of the political spectrum may be one of the keys to the ultimate outcome of the election.

Ironically, the biggest disparity in the perception of Carter's political philosophy exists in the South, where he holds a commanding 68 to 28% lead. In the South, 38% of the voters view themselves as conservatives and another 36% as middle of the road. Yet, only 19% of southerners believe Carter to be conservative, while 26% think of him as middle of the road. And although only 12% of all southerners see themselves as liberals, 29% believe Carter is liberal. In the South, Carter will be testing regional pride and loyalty against considerable differences over political philosophy.

Past Harris Surveys have shown that such neat classifications as "liberal" or "conservative" no longer fit political thinking in this country.

Politicians and political journalists tend to see far more significance in ideology than the public does. A recent Harris Survey showed that only 43% of the American people preferred to choose a candidate for President on the basis of his ideology, while the rest of the electorate votes according to which candidate will most improve the quality of life.

POSTCARD by Stan Delaplane

Huahine — The trading schooners made their weekly call at Huahine this sunny morning and everybody in Fare village turned out. The village is seven or eight Chinese stores. Surprisingly they have as much variety as Macy's and Safeway combined.

You can buy thread and corned beef. Cold beer, bicycle parts and volley balls. The overseas Cantonese are the storekeepers of the South Pacific.

We're 40 minutes by Air Polynesie from Tahiti. Since it costs $26 one way, most island people ride the trading schooners. They take 10 hours overnight. The cost is $4.

The islanders jam them to the gunwales. Eat on deck. Sleep on the deck. Sing and play ukuleles and talk. The altogether intimacy Tahitians adore.

"You and I like a room to ourselves," said Muk McCullum of the Bali Hai. "But if you gave Tahitians a choice, they'd want everybody living, sleeping and eating in one room."

Muk is one of the famous three: Kelley, Carlisle and McCullum. They began with the Bali Hai on the island of Moorea. Parlayed to the Bali Hai on Raiatea. Now on Huahine.

The breeze blows through open dining rooms under bamboo and woven pandanus thatch. The waitresses are barefoot. They wear a wraparound pareu that has the coverage of a bath towel but somehow manages modesty.

These are Les-Iles-Sous-Le-Vent — the Islands-Under-The-Wind. In the evening we take a cold glass of Hinano beer and watch the sun go down over Raiatea across the water.

The sun goes fast this close to the equator. White clouds that have been floating in a blue French banknote sky turn grey.

The sun edges them with pure gold. The gold falls on Raiatea's hills. It was a holy island in old Polynesia. The temples — the marae — are now only piles of stone. But no islander would walk on them for anything in the world.

"We had an American woman who had a house here on Huahine," said Muk, "and she came down with a mysterious fever. Had all sorts of tests over in Papeete hospital. Doctors simply couldn't put a finger on it.

"Finally the old people here asked a tahua, a Tahitian priest of the old style. They still have them though the islanders all go to Christian churches.

"So he said: 'In the road you've been building, you accidentally put in a tiki.'"

Stone tikis can cause terrible trouble. In the tourist stories you can buy wooden tikis — the god statue. But the old stone tikis are the living god.

Muk said: "They looked in the road fill and sure enough they found a tiki. They moved it and set it up some place else. And the woman got well."

Sausage Maker Can Store Silage

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

A German farm equipment company, Eberhardt Co., has turned that nation's method of storing and preserving meat as sausage into a method for storing silage.

It is really a big sausage maker only it uses silage instead of meat, said a University of Nebraska engineer after watching the Silopress work.

Ted Saas, a representative of the Eberhardt Co., claims that 100 of the machines have been sold in the U.S. and about 70 are in operation. We have been finding it easier to sell them than to get them, he said.

The machine stuffs silage into an eight mil plastic sack that is eight feet in diameter and up to 190 feet long. The sack protects it from the air, preserving the feed value at a very low cost, Saas said.

'You can open the sack and then reseal it with some success,' he added.

Company officials claim the machine can store silage at a cost of about a dollar a ton. The Silopress costs about $12,000 and the sacks are about $150 a running foot.

The machine requires a 40- to 60-horsepower tractor to run it efficiently. It has only five moving parts which holds down maintenance problems.

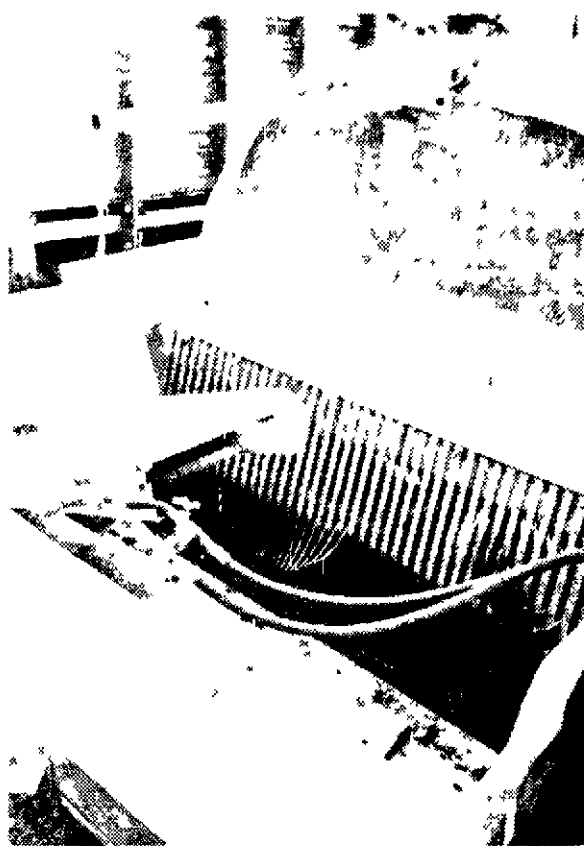

The silage is so tightly packed that if a bag is punctured it usually doesn't allow much spoilage. You can buy a special tape to patch holes in the sack or for use in resealing it after taking out samples for testing.

The machine is said capable of stuffing sacks at the rate of 35 to 45 tons an hour.

Farmers are advised to cut the plant material to be stored in the bags two inches or shorter. Moisture material ranging from 50% to 70% can be stored without adding additives for fermentation or preservation.

'I have always felt that Nebraska farmers did a poor job of putting up silage,' Saas said. 'A lot of what goes into stacks spoils. Cattle may eat it but it doesn't have much feed value. I think the Silopress is the answer.'

Saas revealed the company is considering building a plant somewhere in the Midwest to make the silopress and possibly other machines for the U.S. market.

CHOPPED SILAGE . . . goes in at this end.

At the present a farmer can feed from the sacks using a loader to haul the silage to a bunk, but the company is developing a machine to solve the problem of how to get the silage out of the sacks easier.

Eberhardt Co. has more than 1,000 of the machines in operation in Europe. The company plans to establish at least one dealer in each of the 50 states in the next year.

Spotlight on Agriculture

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

The community garden program around Nebraska has done fairly well for its first year with 239 gardens in operation.

Nearly half of the people in the U.S. now have a garden. More would if they could get some land to grow things on.

We had a real early caller at The Star this year who had a ripe tomato growing in a huge flower pot. Kind of cheating, but it does give you a delicious early bite of tomato even if it doesn't cut the food cost much.

If you are a large-scale gardener, as our large family is, you might want to consider buying a tiller and even a planter.

That planter is the greatest back pain reducer since the electric heat pad.

Another real work saver is a mulch of lawn clippings and leaves or newspaper. It reduces the need for watering and helps hold down weeds.

Gardening can be hard work if you insist, but it doesn't have to be, especially if you can get your kids to do it.

The American sheep industry has a "white paper" they are distributing to groups that think we ought to quit eating meat.

A sheep can produce choice meat without a bit of grain and produce wool for clothing as well. What is more important, they can eat some pretty awful diets and still make meat and wool. Most of the sheep left in the country are grazed in desert and mountain areas that cattle find difficult places to stay alive in.

Sheep will do very well on good quality feeds including grain, but the point is they can convert some very bad pasture into good human food and clothing materials.

There is one animal more efficient than the sheep. The rabbit holds the honor, but rabbits are kind of hard to herd.

President Ford has promised again that he won't impose a grain export embargo. It will be interesting to see if farmers will believe him.

Ford has demonstrated an ability to learn from his mistakes in dealing with farmers. He has changed his mind about the reform needed in the Packers and Stockyards Act, and it is apparent that he will eventually do something about the worst abuses in the grain inspection system. It may be election year pressure or it may be that the President really does learn from his experiences.

It will be interesting to see if the subject will surface again in the upcoming debates.

I wonder if the average watcher of the debates understands enough about how food is produced to make a decision that would result in increased food production here at home.

Farmers must never stop the effort to educate the nonfarm public that it takes money to produce food. They seem to have gotten through to Mr. Ford. George Meany will be harder.

We have all seen those ads on television telling us that women need more iron — men too if they suffer from tired blood. I doubt that we will see a momma pig and her piglet on the tube extolling the stuff, but some farmers have learned that tired blood may be a part of the problem in getting female pigs to have baby pigs in hot weather.

An organic iron compound called Swinacol 600 is said to increase conception rates in hogs in summer months by spectacular numbers. The stuff even shows some improvement in farrowings in winter weather.

That is important to consumers as well as to farmers. One of the major costs in raising pigs is feeding mother pigs that never produce baby pigs or take their time about it.

The people who make the stuff claim it attaches the iron to fat molecules which are absorbed by the lymph system of the hog and from which additional iron is transferred to the blood.

Farmers have known that iron shots for baby pigs can make a fantastic difference in their growth but apparently momma pig needs some iron too.

☆☆☆
With a record number of people employed there has been a sharp improvement in business at restaurants. That is important to farmers because a third of the money spent on food is spent in restaurants.

☆☆☆

If you have recently been approached to buy stock in some sort of cooperative you better check with the State Department of Agriculture. Some recent stock sales have been by phony cooperatives.

Young Fairbury Man Dies In House Blaze

Southeast Nebraska Bureau
Fairbury — A fire early Sunday morning claimed the life of a young Fairbury man as it gutted the interior of his frame bungalow.

The body of Terry Day, 20, was found in the house after firemen were called at about 6:45 a.m. It is believed he died of smoke inhalation.

According to Fairbury police, the fire probably started in living room wiring. Day, unmarried, was alone in the house.

Survivors include his father, Ellis Day of Fairbury; sister, Mrs. Ruck Carmichael of Fairbury; brother, Charles of Georgia, and several stepbrothers.

Weekly Grain Report

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

The grain sorghum harvest has already begun, but early yield reports are bound to be low due to drought damage. Later harvested fields should be higher.

The entire harvest is likely to be as much as a full month earlier than last year because of dry weather speeding maturity.

The early trickle of grain into the elevators is sure to be a price depressor. It will distort normal grain storage figures because of overlapping crop years and make supplies appear larger than they really are.

All the political fuming over embargoes could be making some overseas buyers jumpy.

There have been some substantial orders of grain in the latest summaries of intentions to buy, but the real figure to watch is the ship loadings we report each week in The Star.

Until the grain is on the boat, the effect on the market is not worth much. Of course Russian buying tends to encourage speculators.

Prices riding the up and down elevators of drought and rain will be particularly difficult for farmers who will see smaller changes at their local elevator than are reported at the national grain centers. Predicting those changes is hopelessly complicated.

Speculators will be getting increasingly jittery as Friday approaches because of the impending crop report.

It would appear that the production figures will be lower, but the big question is how much lower than trade expectations.

Industrial Park Fees Decision May Bring Taxpayer's Lawsuit

Beatrice (UPI) — The Gage County Industrial Development Board apparently is looking for a lawsuit to be filed this week against either the board or the county.

The board voted Saturday night to pay Ross Engineering, Inc., Lincoln, $200, which is a portion of a bill for engineering fees for work on the industrial park at Beatrice.

The board action cleared the way for a taxpayer's lawsuit to be filed against the board in an effort to resolve legal questions over the spending of public funds for industrial park development.

The Nebraska Supreme Court ruled in April that no city or county funds could be spent for industrial park development, which brought a halt to development of the Beatrice industrial park.

The Gage County Board had been using federal revenue sharing funds to develop the park, but a Nebraska Attorney General's opinion said the use of such funds violated the court ruling.

The industrial park at Beatrice was cleared last spring and ready for further development, but the board was told Saturday night the cost of clearing the weeds that have grown in the area is $7,500. Additional expenses also would be incurred, if development of the park were to resume, the board was told.

Goofy Roy Clark Wins Fair Crowd

By BOB REEVES
Star Staff Writer

What better way to cap a day at the Nebraska State Fair than with some country-style music and laughs, provided by Roy Clark?

Enough people thought so to fill the new sports-entertainment complex to near capacity Sunday night.

Roy was his goofy self, exuding that warm, human brand of humor that has made TV's "Hee-Haw" so popular. Roy picks a mean guitar. And a banjo.

He fiddles, too. He played the "orange Blossom Special" with all the sound effects, carefully explaining them to the audience — between each note.

He said he has an inborn inclination to play the banjo, since it hangs across his belly — a place he had "a natural tendency to start pickin' at."

What other entertainer could keep the audience in stitches with a live-minute monologue about salve and gauze? (Remember them on your grandmother's medicine shelf?)

Yet when he played "serious," as in his rendition of the love theme from "Dr. Zhivago" on the electric guitar, he exhibited the versatility that has three times earned him the title Country Music Star of the Year.

Roy praised the new arena and its sound system.

"I can't remember playing in a building where everything was so compatible — including the audience," he said.

"If my family didn't need the money I'd do it for nothing," he added.

Also on the program were Tommy Overstreet and the Nashville Express, who served up country music with a strong beat.

Overstreet had a solid response from the audience, too, as he sang several hit songs

Boating Accident In Ernst Lake Leaves 16-Year-Old Youth Dead

Columbus (AP) — Mike Hlavky, 16, of David City, died in a boating accident Sunday afternoon at Ernst Lake in Polk County.

Officials said a boat that had lost a water skier turned around and struck the youth who was lying in the water near shore. He was thrown underneath the boat.

Polk County Coroner Phil Nyberg identified the driver of the boat as Kenneth Kuhnel of Shelby.

Goofy Roy Clark Wins Fair Crowd

By BOB REEVES
Star Staff Writer

What better way to cap a day at the Nebraska State Fair than with some country-style music and laughs, provided by Roy Clark?

Enough people thought so to fill the new sports-entertainment complex to near capacity Sunday night.

Roy was his goofy self, exuding that warm, human brand of humor that has made TV's "Hee-Haw" so popular. Roy picks a mean guitar. And a banjo.

He fiddles, too. He played the "orange blossom special" with all the sound effects, carefully explaining them to the audience — between each note.

He said he has an inborn inclination to play the banjo, since it hangs across his belly — a place he had "a natural tendency to start pickin' at."

What other entertainer could keep the audience in stitches

with a five-minute monologue about salve and gauze? (Remember them on your grandmother's medicine shelf?)

Yet when he played "serious," as in his rendition of the love theme from "Dr. Zhivago" on the electric guitar, he exhibited the versatility that has three times earned him the title Country Music Star of the Year.

Roy praised the new arena and its sound system.

"I can't remember playing in a building where everything was so compatible — including the audience," he said.

"If my family didn't need the money I'd do it for nothing," he added.

Also on the program were Tommy Overstreet and the Nashville Express, who served up country music with a strong beat.

Overstreet had a solid response from the audience, too, as he sang several hit songs.

Colts' Coach Marchibroda Quits

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Baltimore Colts owner Robert Irsay said Sunday he has accepted the resignation of Coach Ted Marchibroda following a dispute over how to run the National Football League Club.

"Marchibroda expressed his concern about the Colts system of running the football club and also requested that the system be changed or otherwise he would resign," Irsay told The Associated Press.

"Based on his request for a change of the entire Baltimore Colts system, I accepted Mr. Ted Marchibroda's resignation."

Marchibroda was the National Football League's Coach of the Year in 1975 after Baltimore won its last 10 games following four defeats to open the season. The Colts won their first two preseason encounters this year, but have dropped the last four.

Irsay said he met with Marchibroda and Colt General Manager Joe Thomas here Sunday for six hours. The club owner said he had intended to meet with them Tuesday in Baltimore. But Irsay said he scheduled the meeting here—where he was a guest at the Milwaukee Yacht Club—because Marchibroda insisted on getting together

Sunday.

After arriving back in Baltimore, Marchibroda issued a statement in which he expressed regret over the resignation.

"The players here are a fine group of men, dedicated to winning," Marchibroda said, "and they don't deserve the internal bickering that has existed here between the coach and management."

"Any coach, in order to lead his men, must have the authority to call the shots. This differs from the ownership and management's position. I couldn't tolerate the interference I was getting. The situation started at the end of last season."

Marchibroda said he was proud of the team's feat of posting a 10-4 regular-season record last year after going 2-12 the previous year.

The 45-year-old coach, who served as an assistant in the NFL for nine years and was a rookie head coach in 1975, said, "I will always be indebted to the Colt management for giving me my first opportunity at a head coaching job in the NFL."

There was no indication what fate was in store for the assistant coaches.

Nicklaus Adds $100,000

To His Wallet

AKRON, Ohio (UPI) — The newspapers will start looking a little more pleasant to Jack Nicklaus now that he is $100,000 richer thanks to his victory Sunday in the World Series of Golf.

"It's been irritating," Nicklaus said. "I'm getting a little tired reading how poorly I've played and what a bad year I've been having."

Sure I hadn't won. But just because you haven't won doesn't mean you're washed up. And that's the implication I've been getting in too many articles.

Nicklaus surely ended any question about being washed up with his rather easy victory in the inaugural of the new World Series in its expanded format.

He faltered briefly at the start, then recovered with some nifty albeit unaccustomed scrambling.

"Obviously I'm delighted," said Nicklaus, who had won only once in 1976 and seemed to be heading for the poorest year of his unmatched career.

It's particularly nice to win when you haven't had that good a year, and especially at tournaments as significant as this one is going to be. You had a pretty darn representative field of world class players.

Nicklaus had a two-stroke lead starting the final round but gave it away by the fourth hole where he chopped it around the green like a Sunday hacker.

I played very well from then on in," he said.

That lapse gave heart to his pursuers and brought back visions of Nicklaus' final round collapse last month in the PGA Championship where he took the lead on the fifth hole, lost it by hitting into water at the sixth hole and never got it back.

But there was to be no repeat of that.

The Golden Bear fought back on a mild breeze and cloudy day to shoot a two-under-par 68 that gave him a 275 total five under par for 72 holes on the long demanding south course at Firestone Country Club, a four-shot victory over Hale Irwin and the richest purse for a one-week tournament in golf history.

Irwin was the only other player in the exclusive international field of 20 able to better par for 72 holes.

The victory was the 60th official title of Nicklaus' 15 tour career, moving him within one of catching Arnold Palmer, the man he supplanted a decade ago as the game's leading player. It raised his winnings this year to $261,769 in 14 events, tops on the tour and an average of $18,697 for each start and for his career to $2,803,742.

It also marked the seventh time — including four unofficial — world series of golf under the old four-man format — Nicklaus had won a tournament at Firestone, a course where he has earned $489,930 in 15 years.

This one came however in unfamiliar fashion.

His driving was erratic. On the front nine he missed five of the seven driving fairways before getting straightened out and missing only one fairway on the back nine. Occasionally when he did hit the fairway, such as at the 13th hole, he hit a wretched second shot.

The key was nine one putt greens.

Nicklaus' recovery shots were superb and his putting was the best it has been in some time. He lost the lead at the fourth hole where his approach shot went over the green. He chipped back all the way past the front edge and then took three from there for double bogey six, and regained it with a short birdie putt at six. But the tournament really was won between the eighth and 13th holes where Nicklaus kept hitting into and then out of trouble and one-putted six greens in a row for three birdies and three pars.

Jakub Earns Midwest Win

By KEN HAMBLETON Star Sports Writer

Columbus Gene Jakub might want to think about specializing in invitational races.

Jakub jumped into the lead from his pole position and led the entire 25-lap race, holding off challenges from Rising City's Marv Hilgren throughout most of the contest Sunday night at Midwest Speedway, during the main event of the Special Hobby Stock Invitational.

Jakub won the Beatrice Invitational Saturday night and has a string of three straight Midwest hobby stock invitational victories.

Tom Watts took the lead on the original start of the race but the first lap wasn't completed before three restarts had been caused by spins and accidents.

Once the race finally got underway, Jakub zipped in front of the 18-car field followed closely by Hilgren and Watts.

Rick Paulus, driving Bob Whitney's car, moved into fifth behind Watts and Ron Withersax after passing Virgil Studebaker on the third lap. But on the next lap when Dan Reed went to pass Paulus, the two cars along with Mel Kucera's became tangled on the backstretch eliminating Paulus from the race.

At the same time on the first turn Dave Wrubel's car went careening into the wall forcing the seventh restart of the race. Withersax blew a tire before the race got underway again sending him to the infield.

On the restart Hilgren got a good jump on Jakub and tried passing the leader on the inside on every turn. But the 19-year veteran managed to utilize the high groove on the track and suppressed the challenge each time, and managed to hold on for the win.

"With all those restarts I began to wonder if anybody had put some extra gas in my car," said Jakub, who finished first in the point standings at David City second at Beatrice and ninth at Midwest. "We were just set up right for this track tonight and I was able to use all the power the car had."

Jakub scored a sweep, winning his heat race, after gaining the lead on the last lap and finishing in a dead heat with Tom Watts in the trophy dash.

Hilgren, who has raced his car only four times this year, said he was surprised with his second place finish. "I didn't think we'd be near winning anything because we just got this car back into action after it sat in the weeds for four years," he said.

"I had one real good chance to pass Jakub towards the end of the race but I hit the brake rather than the gas pedal and we slipped a little bit," Hilgren said.

Hank Bulin won the B Feature after passing Hap Terrill on the third lap of the race. Bulin roared to the win ahead of Terry Enghaus of Carlton, Jim Leigh, Steve Vonderschmidt and Terrill.

Linda Swanson finally got past Connie Davison on the final lap of the powder puff race to capture honors in the 10-lap special race. Davison led throughout the race holding off numerous challenges by Swanson, and managed to finish second ahead of Karen Harthorn.

Midwest Speedway will host a demolition derby Monday night at 8 p.m.

Chris Evert lunges in an attempt to backhand a volley from Great Britain's Glynnis Coles during Evert's 6-0, 6-0 triumph Sunday at the U.S. Open Tennis Championships in Forest Hills, N.Y. "I feel I'm letting people down and lowering my standards if I lose even one game," Evert said.

Polite Nastase Victor

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (UPI) — The Nastase, aware that just one more abusive outburst could get him tossed out of the U.S. Open, Sunday was on his best court behavior and did not protest seriously even once in defeating Marty Riessen, 6-2, 7-5, to advance to the fourth round of the $416,600 tennis championship.

Nastase, 30, filed a letter of protest with Tournament Referee Charlie Hare about the officiating during his match last Friday in which he defeated West Germany's Hans-Jürgen Pohmann. The often bitter duel ended with Nastase shouting abuse at umpire George Armstrong of England, querying nearly every call and making obscene gestures to the crowd.

Nastase was greeted by boos and a few cheers by the capacity crowd when he took the court against Riessen.

He ignored the boos and was completely low key, much the same as he was at Stockholm last December where he won the Masters championship for the fourth time after being defaulted against Arthur Ashe early in the round-robin series when he lost control of his temper.

Nastase queried his first call in the fourth game of the opening set, but when the umpire ruled in favor of Riessen, Nastase turned his back and looked directly at Jimmy Connors, who was sitting in a box with his girlfriend, Margie Wallace, tennis coach Pancho Segura and his business adviser, Mitch Oprea.

Connors gave Nastase hand signals to calm down, to stay cool.

There were no real fireworks during the match. With Chris Evert and Bjorn Borg, the reigning Wimbledon champions preceding Nastase on court and winning easily in their bids for the "Big Two" double, the Stadium Court audience of 13,852 saw no real fireworks.

The day, however, was not devoid of upset. Russia's Olga Morozova, the eighth seed, became the latest casualty on the gray courts of the West Side Tennis Club, 6-4, 6-4, to Kathy Kuykendall of Miami, Fla., in a third round women's singles match.

Evert, apparently completely recovered from the hand injury which kept her out of last week's Federation Cup, defeated Briton Glynnis Coles, 6-0, 6-0, while Borg, extremely sharp where he was sluggish Saturday, defeated another Briton, John Lloyd, 6-3, 6-3.

Brian Gottfried, the 15th seed, defeated Tom Okker, 6-2, 6-2, to set up a fourth round match with Borg.

B. Unser Snares Cal 500

ONTARIO, Calif. (AP) — Bobby Unser "giddyupping as hard as I could" put on a brilliant display of driving, wringing everything he could out of an underpowered car to edge Johnny Rutherford and Gordon Johncock in Sunday's $323,000 California 500, the most competitive 500-mile Indianapolis-type car race ever run.

The race, the final jewel in Indy racing's Triple Crown, was also marred by three grinding crashes, the most serious of which resulted in minor injuries to rookie Danny Ongais, whose car flipped upside down.

"I felt I was lacking a little bit to Gordy and Johnny in straightaway speed," said Unser, who ordered his modified Eagle pulled off the Indy car circuit once this year because it wouldn't go fast enough to suit his ragged edge driving style.

They seemed to be able to outrun me there earlier. I know both of them passed me after one yellow (caution period) on that last one, I thought. 'Hell, I'm not going to let that happen again'."

That was on a caution period which came out with seven laps to go. When it went green again with five laps remaining, Unser gave his copper brown and turquoise Eagle the boot.

When the green flag went down I started giddyupping as hard as I could, he added with a laugh.

"We had everybody beat by one pit stop," he said, "and I thought that would ease our advantage."

Unser made eight service stops to nine for Johncock and 10 for Rutherford.

Jan Opperman formerly of Beaver Crossing, finished sixth in an Eagle-Offenhauser. He completed 194 of the 200 laps. Ex-Lincolnite Roger Rager moved from the 28th starting spot to 17th, finishing 161 laps in his Eagle-Foyt.

Cowboys Close In Super Way

By The Associated Press

They showed why they've been to the Super Bowl. Houston Coach Bum Phillips said of the Dallas Cowboys who finished the exhibition on a high note and now must show for real that they belong in the Super Bowl again.

The Cowboys trailing 20-3 in the third quarter fought back Saturday night to beat Houston 26-20 in overtime and close out the exhibition season with a 3-3 record. The regular National Football League season opens next Sunday.

While Dallas was winning The Championship of Texas, Pittsburgh fans welcomed Joe Namath home while the Steelers battered him in a 41-6 victory over the New York Jets, and Miami and Los Angeles concluded 6-0 preseasons—the Dolphins beating New Orleans 20-7 and the Rams defeating California rival San Francisco 10-3.

In other Saturday night action Oakland beat Seattle 45-28. San Diego edged the New York Giants 14-13 and Cincinnati downed Tampa Bay 24-13.

The final two exhibition games were played Sunday, with the Denver Broncos, 5-2, beating the Minnesota Vikings 30-17 for their fourth straight victory, aided by touchdowns by defensive players Lonnie Perrin and Randy Gradishar, and the New England Patriots 3-3, handed winless Philadelphia its sixth loss, 20-7, on scoring runs by Don Caboun and Ike Forte.

The Steelers sacked Namath six times causing him to say, "I'm not sure exactly what happened out there other than Pittsburgh did a heckava job."

Miami broke a 7-7 tie in the second quarter at New Orleans when Darnell Harris return a punt 59 yards for a touchdown. Quarterback Archie Manning made his first appearance of the year for the Saints who finished at 4-2.

Oakland 5-1 with Ken Stabler passing to Cliff Branch for touchdowns of 60 and 33 yards built up a 45-7 lead before visiting Seattle 1-5, scored three times in the fourth quarter.

Rookie quarterback Neal Jeffrey, who was cut twice by San Diego last season and by the Giants early this year, threw a 27-yard touchdown pass to Charlie Joiner in the third quarter at San Diego as the Chargers 3-3 came back from a 13-0 deficit. New York 4-1 scored two opening-quarter touchdowns, but kicker George Hunt failed to convert after the first.

Cincinnati 4-1 got three touchdown passes from John Reaves, a Tampa native in Tampa to hand the Buccaneers their fifth loss against one victory.

Fertig's Debut Spoiled By Cromwell

By United Press International

Craig Fertig knows what a good quarterback can do for a team.

Fertig, the first year Oregon State coach, quarterbacked the 1964 Southern California team that won seven of 10 games and beat Notre Dame on the final weekend of the season to deprive the Irish of the national championship. Fertig was named the team MVP that year with a total offense of 1,695 yards.

Which is why Fertig was a little leary of opening the 1976 season against Kansas because the Jayhawks have one of the two or three best quarterbacks in the country in Nolan Cromwell. Fertig's fears were justified.

Cromwell was the trigger to a devastating Kansas running attack that rolled up 321 yards Saturday in rallying from a 10-0 deficit to run Fertig's debut with a 26-10 victory over Oregon State.

Cromwell raced 55 yards for one touchdown, Bill Campfield dashed 22 yards for another. Dennis Wright plowed in from the three and Laverne Smith went over the top of his offensive line from one yard out as Kansas erupted after having been held without a first down for the first 20 minutes of the game.

Oregon State took the 10-0 lead in the first quarter on a two-yard run by James Fields and a 22-yard field goal by Keiron Walford and led 10-7 at intermission as Kansas was plagued with first half fumbles, losing four of five bobbles.

In other games Furman upset North Carolina State 17-12. Memphis State dumped Mississippi 21-16. Mississippi State tripped North Texas State 7-0. North Carolina edged Miami of Ohio 14-10. South Carolina clipped Appalachian State 21-10. Virginia Tech beat Wake Forest 23-6 and Tulsa defeated Richmond 22-7.

Quarterback David Whitehurst passed for one touchdown and set up another to lead Furman in its surprising victory over host North Carolina State and spoil the coaching debut of Bo Rein. Rein was named to replace Lou Holtz, who went to the New York Jets.

Sophomore Lloyd Patterson threw for 176 yards and two touchdowns enabling Memphis State to upset powerful Mississippi. Patterson completed nine of 17 passes, throwing 15 yards to Ernest Gray for one touchdown and 35 yards to Ricky Rivas for another.

Quarterback Bruce Threadgill connected on a 31-yard scoring pass to Robert Chatman with 6:22 remaining for the only points in Mississippi State's rain-soaked victory over North Texas State while wingback Mel Collins rushed for a 69-yard touchdown and took a nine-yard pass for another score as North Carolina handed Miami of Ohio its first opening day loss since 1967.

Roscoe Coles and Moses Foster scored touchdowns midway through the third period to lead Virginia Tech to its first season-opening victory, since 1967, quarterback Ronnie Hickerson scored on a six-yard run and fullback Greg Zoschak tallied from one yard out to help Tulsa clip Richmond.

Also, Morehead State punished Marshall 31-14. Drake nipped New Mexico State 30-29. Arkansas State topped Northeast Louisiana 31-13. Texas A-I whipped Texas Southern 36-20 and Texas-El Paso smothered Texas-Arlington 38-15.

Christenson Home Runs End Phils' Skid At 8 Games

By United Press International

Pitcher Larry Christenson personally ended Philadelphia's eight-game losing streak Sunday by belting a pair of home runs and scattering eight hits in 8 1/3 innings to lead the Phillies to a 3-1 victory over the Mets.

Christenson's homers, his first two of the season, came off starter Mickey Lolich and dealt the Mets' left-hander his 12th loss against seven victories. His first home run evened the score 1-1 in the third and his second gave the Phillies a 3-1 lead in the eighth.

Christenson, boosting his record to 11-4, struck out one and did not walk a batter but was lifted in favor of Ron Reed when the Mets put runners on first and second with one out in the ninth. Reed induced Roy Stanger to hit into a game-ending double play. Christenson's victory, his first since July 31, was his fifth without a loss against the Mets this season.

After Christenson's first homer, the Phils went ahead in the sixth when Gary Maddox singled, got to third on a wild pitch and Mike Schmidt's groundout and scored on a sacrifice fly by Greg Luzinski.

Meanwhile, Cincinnati moved a step closer to clinching the NL West pennant by completing a three-game sweep of the Braves as Cesar Geronimo had four hits and Joe Morgan and Dave Concepcion each had three.

Bombo Rivera scored the winning run on second baseman Renne Stennett's eighth-inning error as the Expos snapped Pittsburgh's 10-game winning streak on Wodee Fryman's four-hitter.

Reggie Smith drove in two runs with a triple and home run and Doug Rau three-hitted Houston as the Dodgers won the south of their last seven games and their 10th of the last 12.

Ron Fairly's punch-single in the 11th scored Lou Brock to give the Cardinals a victory over Chicago. Brock opened the 11th with a single off losing pitcher Joe Coleman, whose wild pickoff attempt sent Brock to second, from where he tallied on Fairly's bunt.

John Montefusco without a victory in nearly a month hurled a four-hitter in the first game as San Francisco handed the Padres their eighth straight loss.

In the nightcap Rick Sawyer pitched a six-hitter as San Diego ended its losing streak with a victory over the Giants to earn a split of their doubleheader.

In the American League, Ross Grimsley posted his fourth victory over Jim "Catfish" Hunter and the New York Yankees this season when the Baltimore Orioles used a wild pitch and an error by second baseman Fred Stanley to score three runs in the eighth inning and earn a 5-3 victory.

The Orioles, who sliced the Yankees' A.L. East Division lead to 10 1/2 games, started their eighth-inning rally when Bob Grich walked and took third on a single by Reggie Jackson. Hunter 14-14 wild pitched Grich across with the tie-breaking run and then walked Lee May and Ken Singleton. Tom Muser grounded to second base but Stanley booted the ball allowing Jackson and May to score.

Grimsley scattered eight hits in 8 2/3 innings but needed relief help from Dvir Miller and Tippy Martinez in the ninth. Grimsley is now 7-6.

Jeff Burroughs drove in two runs with a single and a sacrifice fly to back the fourth-hitter of Bert Bivleven and lead Texas over the slumping Royals.

Bivleven allowed the Royals one run in the sixth inning when George Brett tripled and scored on Hal McRae's single. Bivleven, 11-15, struck out five and walked three. Kansas City has now lost six of its last seven and nine of its past 13 contests.

Rod Carew had four hits to spark a club record 22-hit attack and pace the Twins to their shellacking of Chicago.

Carew, who raised his average to .332 in his bid for a fifth straight A.L. batting title, slapped two of his singles in the fifth inning when the Twins scored 10 runs. Mike Cubbage drove in five runs and Roy Smalley four for Minnesota.

Nolan Ryan walked the first three Oakland batters but survived to complete a threehitter for his 12th victory and Tom Solanta chipped his eighth home run as California edged the A's.

Colts' Coach Marchibroda Gifts Nicklaus Adds $100,000 To His Wallet

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Baltimore Colts owner Robert Irsay said Sunday he has accepted the resignation of Coach Ted Marchibroda following a dispute over how to run the National Football League Club.

"Marchibroda expressed his concern about the Colts system of running the football club and also requested that the system be changed or otherwise he would resign," Irsay told The Associated Press.

"Based on his request for a change of the entire Baltimore Colts system, I accepted Mr. Ted Marchibroda's resignation."

Marchibroda was the National Football League's Coach of the Year in 1975 after Baltimore won its last 10 games following four defeats to open the season. The Colts won their first two preseason encounters this year, but have dropped the last four.

Irsay said he met with Marchibroda and Colts General Manager Joe Thomas here Sunday for six hours. The club owner said he had intended to meet with them Tuesday in Baltimore. But Irsay said he scheduled the meeting here—where he was a guest at the Milwaukee Yacht Club—because Marchibroda insisted on getting together

Sunday.

After arriving back in Baltimore, Marchibroda issued a statement in which he expressed regret over the resignation.

"The players here are a fine group of men, dedicated to winning," Marchibroda said, "and they don't deserve the internal bickering that has existed here between the coach and management."

"Any coach, in order to lead his men, must have the authority to call the shots. This differs from the ownership and management's position. I couldn't tolerate the interference I was getting. The situation started at the end of last season."

Marchibroda said he was proud of the team's feat of posting a 10-4 regular-season record last year after going 2-12 the previous year.

The 45-year-old coach, who served as an assistant in the NFL for nine years and was a rookie head coach in 1975, said, "I will always be indebted to the Colts management for giving me my first opportunity at a head coaching job in the NFL."

There was no indication what fate was in store for the assistant coaches.

AKRON, Ohio (UPI) — The newspapers will start looking a little more pleasant to Jack Nicklaus now that he is $100,000 richer thanks to his victory Sunday in the World Series of Golf.

"It's been irritating," Nicklaus said, "I'm getting a little tired reading how poorly I've played and what a bad year I've been having."

"Sure, I hadn't won. But just because you haven't won doesn't mean you're washed up. And that's the implication I've been getting in too many articles."

Nicklaus surely ended any question about being washed up with his rather easy victory in the inaugural of the "new" World Series in its expanded format.

He faltered briefly at the start, then recovered with some nifty, albeit unaccustomed, scrambling.

"Obviously, I'm delighted," said Nicklaus, who had won only once in 1976 and seemed to be heading for the poorest year of his unmatched career.

"It's particularly nice to win when you haven't had that good a year, and especially at tournaments as significant as this one is going to be. You had a pretty darn representative field of world class players."

Nicklaus had a two-stroke lead starting the final round, but gave it away by the fourth hole, where he chopped it around the green like a Sunday hacker.

"I played very well from then on in," he said.

That lapse gave heart to his pursuers and brought back visions of Nicklaus' final round collapse last month in the PGA Championship, where he took the lead on the fifth hole, lost it by hitting into water at the sixth hole, and never got it back.

But there was to be no repeat of that.

The "Golden Bear" fought back on a mild, breezy and cloudy day to shoot a 275 total, five under par for 72 holes on the long, demanding south course at Firestone Country Club, a four-shot victory over Hale Irwin, and the richest purse for a one-week tournament in golf history.

Irwin was the only other player in the exclusive, international field of 20 able to better par for 72 holes.

The victory was the 60th official title of Nicklaus' U.S. tour career, moving him within one of catching Arnold Palmer, the man he supplanted a decade ago as the game's leading player. It raised his winnings this year to $261,769 in 14 events, tops on the tour and an average of $18,697 for each start, and for his career to $2,803,542.

It also marked the seventh time — including four "unofficial" world series of golf under the old, four-man format — Nicklaus had won a tournament at Firestone, a course where he has earned $489,930 in 15 years.

This one came, however, in unfamiliar fashion.

His driving was erratic. On the front nine, he missed five of the seven driving fairways before getting straightened out and missing only one fairway on the back nine. Occasionally, when he did hit the fairway, such as at the 13th hole, he hit a wretched second shot.

The key was nine one-putt greens.

Nicklaus' recovery shots were superb, and his putting was the best it has been in some time. He lost the lead at the fourth hole where his approach shot went over the green, he chipped back all the way past the front edge, and then took three from there for double bogey six, and regained it with a short birdie putt at six. But the tournament really was won between the eighth and 13th holes where Nicklaus kept hitting into and then out of trouble and one-putted six greens in a row for three birdies and three pars.

Cowboys Close In Super Bowl

"They showed why they've been to the Super Bowl," Houston Coach Bum Phillips said of the Dallas Cowboys who finished the exhibition on a high note and now must show for real that they belong in the Super Bowl again.

The Cowboys, trailing 20-3 in the third quarter, fought back Saturday night to beat Houston 26-20 in overtime and close out the exhibition season with a 3-3 record. The regular National Football League season opens next Sunday.

While Dallas was winning "The Championship of Texas," Pittsburgh fans welcomed Joe Namath home while the Steelers battered him in a 41-6 victory over the New York Jets, and Miami and Los Angeles concluded 60 preseason—the Dolphins beating New Orleans 20-7 and the Rams defeating California rival San Francisco 10-3.

In other Saturday night action, Oakland beat Seattle 45-28. San Diego edged the New York Giants 14-13 and Cincinnati downed Tampa Bay 24-13.

The final two exhibition games were played Sunday, with the Denver Broncos, 5-2, beating the Minnesota Vikings 30-17 for their fourth straight victory, aided by touchdowns by defensive players Lonnie Perrin and Randy Gradishar, and the New England

The Steelers sacked Namath six times causing him to say, "I'm not sure exactly what happened out there other than Pittsburgh did a heckava job."

Miami broke a 7-7 tie in the second quarter at New Orleans when Duane Harris return a punt 59 yards for a touchdown. Quarterback Archie Manning made his first appearance of the year for the Saints who finished at 4-2.

Jakub Earns Midwest Win

By KEN HAMBLETON
Star Sports Writer

Columbus' Gene Jakub might want to think about specializing in invitational races.

Jakub jumped into the lead from his pole position and led the entire 25-lap race, holding off challenges from Rising City's Marv Hilgren throughout most of the contest Sunday night at Midwest Speedway, during the main event of the Special Hobby Stock Invitational.

Jakub won the Beatrice Invitational Saturday night and has a string of three straight Midwest hobby stock invitational victories.

Tom Watts took the lead on the original start of the race but the first lap wasn't completed before three restarts had been caused by spins and accidents.

Once the race finally got underway, Jakub zipped in front of the 18-car field followed closely by Hilgren and Watts.

Rick Paulus, driving Bob Whitney's car, moved into fifth behind Watts and Ron Witherwax after passing Virgil Studebaker on the third lap. But on the next lap when Dan Reed went to pass Paulus, the two cars along with Mel Kucera's became tangled on the backstretch eliminating Paulus from the race.

At the same time on the first turn Dave Wrubel's car went careening into the wall forcing the seventh restart of the race. Witherwax blew a tire before the race got underway again sending him to the infield.

On the restart Hilgren got a good jump on Jakub and tried passing the leader on the inside on every turn. But the 19-year veteran managed to utilize the high groove on the track and suppressed the challenge each time, and managed to hold on for the win.

"With all those restarts I began to wonder if anybody had put some extra gas in my car," said Jakub, who finished first in the point standings at David City, second at Beatrice and ninth at Midwest. "We were just set up right for this track tonight and I was able to use all the power the car had."

Chris Evert lunges in an attempt to backhand a volley from Great Britain's Glynnis Coles during Evert's 6-0, 6-0 triumph Sunday at the U.S. Open Tennis Championships in Forest Hills, N.Y. "I feel I'm letting people down and lowering my standards if I lose even one game," Evert said.

Polite Nastase Victor

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (UPI) — Ilie Nastase, aware that just one more abusive outburst could get him tossed out of the U.S. Open, Sunday was on his best court behavior and did not protest seriously even once in defeating Marty Riessen, 6-2, 7-5, to advance to the fourth round of the $416,600 tennis championship.

Nastase, 30, filed a letter of protest with Tournament Referee Charlie Hare about the officiating during his match last Friday in which he defeated West Germany's Hans-Jürgen Pohmann. The often bitter duel ended with Nastase shouting abuse at umpire George Armstrong of England, querying nearly every call and making obscene gestures to the crowd.

Nastase was greeted by boos and a few cheers by the capacity crowd when he took the court against Riessen.

He ignored the boos and was completely low key, much the same as he was at Stockholm last December where he won the Masters championship for the fourth time after being defaulted against Arthur Ashe early in the round-robin series when he lost control of his temper.

Nastase queried his first call in the fourth game of the opening set, but when the umpire ruled in favor of Riessen, Nastase turned his back and looked directly at Jimmy Connors, who was sitting in a box with his girlfriend, Margie Wallace, tennis coach Pancho Segura and his business adviser, Mitch Oprea.

Connors gave Nastase hand signals to calm down, to stay cool.

There were no real fireworks during the match.

With Chris Evert and Bjorn Borg, the reigning Wimbledon champions preceding Nastase on court and winning easily in their bids for the "Big Two" double, the Stadium Court audience of 15,852 saw no real fireworks.

The day, however, was not devoid of upset.

Russia's Olga Morozova, the eighth seed, became the latest casualty on the gray courts of the West Side Tennis Club, 6-4, 6-4, to Kathy Kuykendall of Miami, Fla., in a third round women's singles match.

Evert, apparently completely recovered from the hand injury which kept her out of last week's Federation Cup, defeated Briton Glynnis Coles, 6-0, 6-0, while Borg, extremely sharp where he was sluggish Saturday, defeated another Briton, John Lloyd, 6-3, 6-3.

Brian Gottfried, the 15th seed, defeated Tom Okker, 6-2, 6-2, to set up a fourth round match with Borg.

Fertig's Debut Spoiled By Cromwell

By United Press International

Craig Fertig knows what a good quarterback can do for a team.

Fertig, the first year Oregon State coach, quarterbacked the 1964 Southern California team that won seven of 10 games and beat Notre Dame on the final weekend of the season to deprive the Irish of the national championship. Fertig was named the team MVP that year with a total offense of 1,695 yards.

Which is why Fertig was a little leary of opening the 1976 season against Kansas because the Jayhawks have one of the two or three best quarterbacks in the country in Nolan Cromwell. Fertig's fears were justified.

Cromwell was the trigger to a devastating Kansas running attack that rolled up 321 yards Saturday in rallying from a 10-0 deficit to ruin Fertig's debut with a 26-10 victory over Oregon State.

Cromwell raced 55 yards for one touchdown, Bill Campfield dashed 22 yards for another, Dennis Wright plowed in from the three and Laverne Smith went over the top of his offensive line from one yard out as Kansas erupted after having been held without a first down for the first 20 minutes of the game.

Oregon State took the 10-0 lead in the first quarter on a two-yard run by James Fields and a 22-yard field goal by Keiron Walford and led 10-7 at intermission as Kansas was plagued with first half fumbles, losing four of five bobbles.

In other games, Furman upset North Carolina State 17-12, Memphis State dumped Mississippi 21-16, Mississippi State tripped North Texas State 7-0, North Carolina edged Miami of Ohio 14-10, South Carolina clipped Appalachian State 21-10, Virginia Tech beat Wake Forest 23-6 and Tulsa defeated Richmond 22-7.

Quarterback David Whitehurst passed for one touchdown and set up another to lead Furman in its surprising victory over host North Carolina State and spoil the coaching debut of Bo Rein. Rein was named to replace Lou Holtz, who went to the New York Jets.

Sophomore Lloyd Patterson threw for 176 yards and two touchdowns enabling Memphis State to upset powerful Mississippi. Patterson completed nine of 17 passes, throwing 15 yards to Ernest Gray for one touchdown and 55 yards to Ricky Rivas for another.

Quarterback Bruce Threadgill connected on a 31-yard scoring pass to Robert Chatman with 6:22 remaining for the only points in Mississippi State's rain-soaked victory over North Texas State while wingback Mel Collins rushed for a 69-yard touchdown and took a nine-yard pass for another score as North Carolina handed Miami of Ohio its first opening day loss since 1967.

Roscoe Coles and Moses Foster scored touchdowns midway through the third period to lead Virginia Tech to its first season-opening victory since 1967; quarterback Ronnie Hickerson scored on a six-yard run and fullback Greg Zoschak tallied from one yard out to help Tulsa clip Richmond.

Also, Morehead State punished Marshall 31-14, Drake nipped New Mexico State 30-29, Arkansas State toppled Northeast Louisiana 31-13, Texas A-I whipped Texas Southern 36-20 and Texas-El Paso smothered Texas-Arlington 38-15.

Christenson Home Runs End Phils' Skid At 8 Games

By United Press International

Pitcher Larry Christenson personally ended Philadelphia's eight-game losing streak Sunday by belting a pair of home runs and scattering eight hits in 8 1-3 innings to lead the Phillies to a 3-1 victory over the Mets.

Christenson's homers, his first two of the season, came off starter Mickey Lolich and dealt the Mets' left-hander his 12th loss against seven victories. His first home run evened the score 1-1 in the third and his second gave the Phils a 3-1 lead in the eighth.

Christenson, boosting his record to 11-8, struck out one and did not walk a batter but was lifted in favor of Ron Reed when the Mets put runners on first and second with one out in the ninth. Reed induced Roy Staiger to hit into a game-ending double play. Christenson's victory, his first since July 31, was his fifth without a loss against the Mets this season.

After Christenson's first homer, the Phils went ahead in the sixth when Gary Maddox singled, got to third on a wild pitch and Mike Schmidt's groundout and scored on a sacrifice fly by Greg Muzinski.

Meanwhile, Cincinnati moved a step closer to clinching the NL West pennant by completing a three-game sweep of the Braves as Cesar Geronimo had four hits and Joe Morgan and Dave Concepcion each had three.

Bombero Rivera scored the winning run on second baseman Rennie Stennett's eighth-inning error as the Expos snapped Pittsburgh's 10-game winning streak on Woodie Fryman's four-hit victory.

Reggie Smith drove in two runs with a triple and home run and Doug Rau three-hit Houston as the Dodgers won the sixth of their last seven games and their 10th of the last 12.

Ron Fairly's pinch-single in the 11th scored Lou Brock to give the Cardinals a victory over Chicago. Brock opened the 11th with a single off losing pitcher Joe Coleman, whose wild pickoff attempt sent Brock to second, from where he tallied on Fairly's baseshit.

John Montefusco, without a victory in nearly a month, hurled a four-hitter in the first game as San Francisco handed the Padres their eighth straight loss.

In the nightcap, Rick Sawyer pitched a six-hitter as San Diego ended its losing streak with a victory over the Giants to earn a split of their doubleheader.

In the American League, Ross Grimsley posted his fourth victory over Jim "Catfish" Hunter and the New York Yankees this season when the Baltimore Orioles used a wild pitch and an error by second baseman Fred Stanley to score three runs in the eighth inning and earn a 5-3 victory.

The Orioles, who sliced the Yankees' A.L. East Division lead to 10 1/2 games, started their eighth-inning rally when Bob Grich walked and took third on a single by Reggie Jackson. Hunter, 14-14, wild pitched Grich across with the tie-breaking run and then walked Lee May and Ken Singleton. Tony Muser grounded to second base, but Stanley booted the ball allowing Jackson and May to score.

Grimsley scattered eight hits in 8 2-3 innings but needed relief help from Dyer Miller and Tippy Martinez in the ninth. Grimsley is now 7-6.

Jeff Burroughs drove in two runs with a single and a sacrifice fly to back the fourth pitching of Bert Blyleven and lead Texas over the slumping Royals.

B. Unser Snares Cal 500

ONTARIO, Calif. (AP) — Bobby Unser, "giddyupping as hard as I could," put on a brilliant display of driving, wringing everything he could out of an underpowered car to edge Johnny Rutherford and Gordon Johncock in Sunday's $323,000 California 500, the most competitive 500-mile Indianapolis-type car race ever run.

The race, the final jewel in Indy racing's Triple Crown, was also marred by three grinding crashes, the most serious of which resulted in minor injuries to rookie Danny Ongais, whose car flipped upside down.

"I felt I was lacking a little bit to Gordy and Johnny in straightaway speed," said Unser, who ordered his modified Eagle pulled off the Indy car circuit once this year because it wouldn't go fast enough to suit his ragged edge driving style. "They seemed to be able to outrun me there earlier. I know both of them passed me after one yellow (caution period). On that last one, I thought, 'Hell, I'm not going to let that happen again.'"

That was on a caution period which came out with seven laps to go. When it went green again with five laps remaining, Unser gave his copper, brown and turquoise Eagle the boot.

"When the green flag went down, I started giddyupping as hard as I could," he added with a laugh.

"We had everybody beat by one pit stop," he said, "and I thought that would erase our advantage."

Unser made eight service stops to nine for Johncock and 10 for Rutherford.

Jan Opperman, formerly of Beaver Crossing, finished sixth in an Eagle-Offenhauser. He completed 194 of the 200 laps. Ex-Incolnrite Roger Rager moved from the 28th starting spot to 17th, finishing 161 laps in his Eagle-Foyt.

6 RMS RIV VU Lacking In Cohesive Stage Effort

By David Meisenholder
The disappointing season opener, "6 RMS RIV VU," now on stage at the Lincoln Community Playhouse lacks a total effort to present a creative and unified production by basically talented and hard-working community theater participants.

There are three exceptions. Leading players Andrea Visuthupol and Steve Enerson and supporting actress Jan Healey give excellent performances. With a little more care and attention the Community Playhouse group would have presented a production to qualify with the fine Playhouse season of last spring and fall.

"6 RMS RIV VU" is actually an abbreviation of a New York City newspaper apartment-for-rent ad — six rooms on Riverside Drive with a view of the Hudson river. It is here that a man and woman meet while inspecting the apartment and become accidentally locked inside due to a faulty door knob. While trapped inside the two find each other amusing, engaging and with similar likes and dislikes. Their emotional involvement eventually develops into a physical encounter.

The technical elements which enhance audience enjoyment of live theater were completely absent in this production.

Don Yanik's ineffective set design of a vacant apartment, complete with maid's quarters reflects none of the interior structural elegance of this type of Riverside Drive New York City dwelling. Even though the play calls for a vacant apartment, Yanik could have utilized, for example bay windows with built in seating, a lavish foyer with a few steps leading to the living room, and, at least, a covered radiator on which the performers could have seated themselves for variety in movement.

Because of the empty setting, lighting designer D. Doc Chavis should have totally bathed the actors in extensive, subtle stage lighting. This he did not. What lighting that existed seldom was executed on cue which only called attention to what was already poor.

The sound effects with the exception of the dog barking were poorly done and, thus, distracting.

The costumes by Dottie Stoesz were a conglomeration of ill-fitting clothes which certainly did nothing to enhance either Ms. Visuthupol's character or this actress' excellent stage movement.

Director Molly Lange was able to guide the talented Ms. Visuthupol and Mr. Enerson through some very funny units of the comedy, but she failed to sense when to "take the curtain."

after the performers delivered expertly the comedy curtain lines.

The director's interpretation of the supporting character played by actress Patty Wilder Plotnick completely misfired. The comedy demands the character to be a pseudo-sophisticated snobbish Eastern girls school stereotype. Ms. Plotnick was not. The already suffering second act thus suffered more.

Although it is a positive forward step to utilize guest directors for the main stage performances at the Playhouse this play needed the tutelage of Playhouse Managing Director John R. Wilson.

The leading roles performed by Andrea Visuthupol and Steve Enerson were performed with talent and know how. Both of these fine performers are expert in developing believable characters and both of them know exactly how to put forth the many comic lines.

Actress Jan Healey playing the women living in the apartment across the hall was simply a riot. Ms. Healey's New Yorker's accent of sorts along with a bizzare husky voice was an immediate audience pleaser every moment she was on stage.

The comedy continues at the Lincoln Community Playhouse 2500 S. 56th September 10-12 and 17-19. Curtain is at 8 p.m.

1976 NEBRASKA STATE FAIR

6 RMS RIV VU Lacking In Cohesive Stage Effort

By David Meisenholder
The disappointing season opener, "6 RMS RIV VU," now on stage at the Lincoln Community Playhouse lacks a total effort to present a creative and unified production by basically talented and hard-working community theater participants.

There are three exceptions. Leading players Andrea Visuthipol and Steve Enerson and supporting actress Jan Healey give excellent performances. With a little more care and attention the Community Playhouse group would have presented a production to qualify with the fine Playhouse season of last spring and fall.

"6 RMS RIV VU" is actually an abbreviation of a New York City newspaper apartment-for-rent ad — six rooms on Riverside Drive with a view of the Hudson river. It is here that a man and woman meet while inspecting the apartment and become accidentally locked inside due to a faulty door knob. While trapped inside the two find each other amusing, engaging and with similar likes and dislikes. Their emotional involvement eventually develops into a physical encounter.

The technical elements which enhance audience enjoyment of live theater were completely absent in this production.

Don Yanik's ineffective set

design of a vacant apartment, complete with maid's quarters, reflects none of the interior structural elegance of this type of Riverside Drive New York City dwelling. Even though the play calls for a vacant apartment, Yanik could have utilized, for example, bay windows with built in seating, a lavish foyer with a few steps leading to the living room, and, at least, a covered radiator on which the performers could have seated themselves for variety in movement.

Because of the empty setting, lighting designer D. Doc Chavis should have totally bathed the actors in extensive, subtle stage lighting. This he did not. What lighting that existed seldom was executed on cue which only called attention to what was already poor.

The sound effects, with the exception of the dog barking, were poorly done and, thus, distracting.

The costumes by Dottie Stoesz were a conglomeration of ill-fitting clothes which certainly did nothing to enhance either Ms. Visuthipol's character or this actress' excellent stage movement.

Director Molly Lange was able to guide the talented Ms. Visuthipol and Mr. Enerson through some very funny units of the comedy, but she failed to sense when to "take the curtain" after the performers delivered expertly the comedy curtain lines.

The director's interpretation of the supporting character played by actress Patty Wylder Plotnick completely misfired. The comedy demands the character to be a pseudo-sophisticated, snobbish, Eastern girls school stereotype. Ms. Plotnick was not. The already suffering second act thus suffered more.

Although it is a positive forward step to utilize guest directors for the main stage performances at the Playhouse, this play needed the tutelage of Playhouse Managing Director John R. Wilson.

The leading roles performed by Andrea Visuthipol and Steve Enerson were performed with talent and know-how. Both of these fine performers are expert in developing believable characters and both of them know exactly how to put forth the many comic lines.

Actress Jan Healey, playing the women living in the apartment across the hall, was simply a riot. Ms. Healey's New Yorker's accent of sorts, along with a bizzare husky voice, was an immediate audience pleaser every moment she was on stage.

The comedy continues at the Lincoln Community Playhouse, 2500 S. 56th, September 10-12, and 17-19. Curtain is at 8 p.m.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:
A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

THIS FAMILY PORTRAIT WE JUST HAD MADE MAKES ME LOOK SO MUCH OLDER THAN I AM!
YOU SHOULD BE GLAD, MOMMY!
NOW YOU WON'T HAVE TO GET A PICTURE MADE WHEN YOU GET OLDER!

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST
By SIDNEY OMARR (Sept.)

Monday, September 6, 1976

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Children, affection, love, change, speculative ventures are part of personal scenario. Your "Mark" is imprinted — you find that people are reacting to you — intensely or coolly, nothing halfway. Capricorn, Cancer figure prominently.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): This is "rush" time for you; areas that were dark receive benefit of greater light. Secret reports, files are opened and you benefit. Specifically, you learn about property and its value... how best to insure security.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Short trips, family reunions, visits and views could be featured. You may feel pulled in two directions. Key — to share knowledge, to permit intuition, intellect free rein — and to let those close to you know that you are an individual, not an appendage.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Accent on possessions, valuables, money, payments and collections. You locate what has been missing, you consolidate. You gain greater understanding of assets. Your views are published, distributed. You are part of a "celebration" and you get too much.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Moon in your zodiacal sign corresponds with emphasis on personality, response from public spotlight, initiative. Timing improves. You also find genuine bargain in apparel. Your unorthodox qualities, methods gain greater acceptance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Theater, film, the media, backstage glimpses — these could be part of your personal panorama. Gemini, Virgo persons could be involved. Open dialogue with one who writes, speaks, graphically illustrates points. Member of opposite sex does figure prominently.

IF SEPTEMBER 6TH IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you have a "manous" voice, a tendency towards extravagance when it comes to luxury items... and a "sweet tooth." In October, emotional pressure is released. You'll be free of burden. You get long-distance communication that leads to vacation-travel plans. Taurus, Libra persons play important roles in your life.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Emphasis on partnership, commitment, legal agreement, public relations, marriage. You are associated with "box" days, meaningful compliment. You may be given assignment that requires close attention to detail. Key is to state needs in frank, direct manner; stick to facts — leave fantasy for another time.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Long-range plans, travel, communication — these areas spotlighted. Find out what things happen. Be analytical. Take seriously words by member of opposite sex. Your ability to understand, to perceive potential is stressed. Virgo, and another Gemini — are in picture.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Dig beneath surface — be aware of financial, emotional needs of partner, mate. You locate lost articles, gain understanding of clauses, leases, requirements, persuasions from various quarters. Involvement with member of opposite sex is distinct possibility.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Practical matters dominate. You learn about costs, credits, debts. You also find out about organization, priorities, the handling of added responsibility. You are compensated but you work for what is received. No free lunch!

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a number; a puzzle designed to lead you to a fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 2. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
